

The background of the entire cover is an impressionist painting of a rainy street scene. In the foreground, a woman in a dark dress and white apron holds a large red umbrella. Other figures with umbrellas are visible in the background, and the ground is wet and reflective. The overall style is soft and atmospheric, typical of Impressionism.

but found that he could not so the novel was not included Other readers though have sufficiently enjoyed the book to make it one of the more popular works of the Jamesian canon The bitterest irony in the story is that Dr Sloper a brilliant and successful physician is exactly right about Morris Townsend and yet he is cruel to his defenseless and loving daughter If the doctor had been incorrect in his appraisal of the worthless Townsend he would be only a stock villain As it is the doctor's head functions perfectly but his heart has grown cold after the death of his beautiful and gifted wife Catherine gradually grows throughout the story ultimately gaining the ability to judge her situation accurately As James puts it From her point of view the great facts of her career were that Morris Townsend had trifled with her affection and that her father had broken its spring Nothing could ever alter these facts they were always there like her name her age her plain face Nothing could ever undo the wrong or cure the pain that Morris had inflicted on her and nothing could ever make her feel towards her father as she felt in her younger years Catherine will never be brilliant but she learns to be clear sighted
