process used to making teas and black tea grown in China but its production and manufacture had to other countries in East Asia. Several varieties grown in tea which differ substantially on the variety of substances used growing and the horticultural methods used in growing and time harvested. Although there has been no direct research on the possible health effects of consuming green tea, generally there is little evidence that drinking green tea has any effect on health. Green tea has been shown to be the best beverage after water. Traditional Chinese medicine has innumerable health benefits. Both cardiovascular and neurological diseases, diabetes, kidney disorders, kidney cancer, the antioxidants in green tea fight them all. But the benefits do not know the right way to grow and find them correctly. The will not reveal the health benefits and will end up tasting bitter and gross. So remember that you understand and master the method of growing green tea. Read on to find out how to make green tea that will rejuvenate and improve your body. But first let me tell you a little bit about green tea. The practice of drinking green tea in China began in the 17th century. The Emperor of China in 2737 BC when a few tea tree leaves fell into his soup, boiled with rice. Later Chinese monks started drinking green tea for religious meditation. The health benefits of tea would fit in very well to Indian traditions to spread Buddhism and the tea miracle drink with them. Thereafter green tea gained popularity. Green tea, Camellia sinensis, and green tea leaves have to be dried before the tea pickers harvest them. The leaves from the apex of the tea plant are processed in a way that prevents too much oxidation. And this is the key to processing tea that makes green tea not oxidized. The green tea from China has many varieties, whereas the green tea from America and India has only one. However, both have the same health benefits. Green tea, Camellia sinensis, is an antioxidant. The traditional method of processing green tea involves withering, though not low temperature drying. It has anti-inflammatory and cellulite reducing properties. It has high antioxidant capacity. Green tea also aids in weight loss, supplements the metabolic resting rate, and the release of endorphins. NA determines brown fat, which is good. Methylcysteine supplementation with green tea reduces the risk of type 2 diabetes and prevents cardiovascular disease, including Alzheimer's. Green tea, when consumed, has good health benefits.
