

Solving Equations

Many algebra problems are actually based on being comfortable in using equal algebraic equations, an equation is a statement that two expressions are equal. The unknowns in equations (the variables) will usually be represented by letters. The solution of the equation is a list of values for the variables that will make the equation true. For example, if the equation is $x + 2 = 5$, then $x = 3$ is the solution.

While there are many properties of real numbers and properties of equations that are used when solving equations, the following properties are the most important.

Basic Properties of Equations

Substitution property

If the expression A is equal to the expression B , then A can be substituted for B in any equation.

$$\text{If } A = B \text{ then } A \text{ can be substituted for } B \text{ in any equation.}$$

Substitution property

$$\text{If } A = B \text{ then } A \text{ can be substituted for } B \text{ in any equation.}$$

If two equations based on the substitution property, then they are equivalent equations. Two equations are equivalent if they have the same solution set.

$$\text{If } A = B \text{ then } A \text{ can be substituted for } B \text{ in any equation.}$$

Properties of Equations

Addition property

$$\text{If } A = B \text{ then } A + C = B + C$$

Subtraction property

$$\text{If } A = B \text{ then } A - C = B - C$$

If two equations differ from each other by the same number added to each side, then they are equivalent.

Subtraction property

$$\text{If } A = B \text{ then } A - C = B - C \text{ for any equation.}$$

If two equations differ from each other by the same number added to each side, then they are equivalent. If two equations differ from each other by the same number subtracted from each side, then they are equivalent.

Multiplication property

$$\text{If } A = B \text{ then } A \cdot C = B \cdot C$$

Division property

$$\text{If } A = B \text{ then } \frac{A}{C} = \frac{B}{C} \text{ for any equation.}$$
