Abstract: The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of young adults. The study was conducted in a university setting and involved 100 participants. The participants were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group underwent a 12-week training program, while the control group did not. The study found that the experimental group showed significant improvements in physical health, including increased cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and endurance. Additionally, the experimental group also showed improvements in psychological health, including reduced stress levels and increased self-esteem. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can have a positive impact on the physical and psychological health of young adults.
