Tea Recipes Dr Jim Russell, 2021-03-11 Green tea is that medium from Camellia sinensis living buds that have not undergone the withering and oxidation process used to make long teas and black tea. Green tea is grown in China but its production and manufacture has spread to other countries in East Asia. Various varieties of green tea exist which differ substantially in the variety of substances used growing and the horticultural methods produced. The time of harvest. Although there has been no direct research on the possible health effects of consuming green tea, generally there is little evidence that drinking green tea has a beneficial health effect. Green tea has been shown to be best for weight loss after weight loss. Traditional Chinese medicine has innumerable health benefits. Both cardiovascular and neurological diseases, diabetes, kidney disorders, kidney cancer, antioxidants in green tea fight them all. But the real medicine does not know the right way to treat green tea. And you do not treat it correctly. It will not treat the health benefits and will end up tasting bitter and gross. So remember that you understand and master the method of producing green tea. Read on to find out how to make green tea that will rejuvenate and improve your body. But first let me tell you a little bit about green tea. The practice of drinking green tea is grown in China. Legend has it that the world's first emperor of China in 2737 BC when a few tea tree leaves fell into his soup, boiled water. Later Chinese monks started drinking green tea for religious meditation. The health benefits of tea would eventually lead to India and then to places to spread Buddhism and the tea miracle drink with them. Thereafter green tea gained popularity. Green tea from Camellia sinensis is a native form of tea that is rich in antioxidants. Although green tea and black tea are both made from the same plant, Camellia sinensis, green tea leaves have to be dried differently. The tea pickers have to pick the fresh leaves from the apex. The leaves are then processed in a way that prevents too much oxidation. And this is the key to processing tea that makes green tea not oxidize. The green tea from China has a low level of oxidation whereas the green tea from America has a high level of oxidation. However, both have health benefits. Green tea contains an antioxidant. The method of processing green tea involves withering, which is not low heat drying. It has anti-inflammatory, anti-irritation and cellulite reducing properties. It is high in antioxidants. Green tea also reduces weight loss supplements, not only for the metabolic resting rate and the release of energy. NA determining body weight through green tea. Methyl supplementation with green tea reduces the level of type 2 diabetes and prevents cardiovascular and neurological diseases including Alzheimer's. Green tea when consumed has good health benefits. Starbucks Copycat
