One Health: The Well-being Impacts of Human-nature Relationships Eric Brymer, Elizabeth Louise Freeman, Miles Richardson, 2019-11-07 In recent years there has been a growing body of evidence from fields such as public health architecture ecology landscape forestry psychology sport science psychiatry geography suggesting that nature enhances psychological health and wellbeing Physical activity in the presence of nature feelings of connection to nature engagement with nature specific environmental features e g therapeutic water and trees and images of real and virtual nature have all been posited as important wellbeing facilitators Thus the association between natural environments and health outcomes might be more complex than initially understood Pritchard Richardson Sheffield Karmanov Freeman Akhurst 2015 in the development of wellbeing and health outcomes Furthermore traditional theoretical notions such as Biophilia topophilia restoration theories and stress reduction theories typically used to interpret findings are also being critiqued Often one of the main barriers for practitioners is the vast array of theories that claim to effectively explain research findings but that tend to be only partially relevant e g for Physical activity or restoration focus on the characteristics of the person e g nature relatedness and only some features of the landscape e g therapeutic landscapes This special edition therefore brings together cutting edge ideas and research from a wide set of disciplines with the purpose of exploring interdisciplinary or trans disciplinary approaches to understanding the psychological health and wellbeing benefits of human nature interactions

Making Connections Bettie Higgs, Shane Kilcommins, Tony Ryan, 2010 In this volume the authors document examples of programmes courses activities that are designed intentionally to build students capacity to be integrative thinkers and learners In doing so they try to analyse and name the learning that is taking place and so make it visible to the reader The work is intended as a resource for all those involved in teaching and student learning in Higher Education and beyond The ultimate goal is to ensure that students in higher education can make meaningful connections within and between disciplines for example by integrating on campus and off campus learning experiences and tying together and synchronising different perspectives and ways of knowing This paper contains the following chapters

Making Connections Ann Dalton Bagchi,2001 Utilizing quantitative and qualitative research methods Bagchi examines the role that networks play in the immigration of professionals to the United States Past research of so called migrant networks emphasized the role of close interpersonal ties and focused on lower skilled immigrants This research shows that casual ties play a significant role in bringing highly skilled immigrants to the U S but also that the importance of the strength of ties varies considerably by gender and occupation Bagchi used two quantitative data sources the Immigration and Naturalization Services Public Use files and the Microdata files of the United States Census Bureau as well as her own qualitative interviews The book makes an important contribution to the understanding of the immigration experience through its study of heretofore neglected segments of the immigrant population and through its use of a combination of research techniques Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations for ...
