4. Helmholtz Resonator

Aim: To verify the relation between the frequency and the resonating volume of air using a narrow-necked resonator and to determine the unknown frequency of a tuning fork as well as the neck correction.

Apparatus: A narrow-necked resonator, a set of tuning forks with one fork of unknown frequency, measuring cylinder, striking pad, beaker, water.

Formula: $n^2(V + kV_n) = C$

Where n is frequency of the tuning fork

V is volume of resonating air

V_n is volume of neck

k is neck correction factor

Diagram:

Procedure:

1. Fill the resonator completely with water. Keep an empty measuring cylinder below the resonator. Now allow the water to flow out at a slow rate by using a pinch cock till the water level comes to the base of the neck. Record the volume of water collected in the cylinder. This volume is the volume of neck (V_n).
2. Arrange the tuning forks in the ascending order of frequencies.
3. Set the fork of highest frequency into vibration and hold it just above the mouth of the resonator filled with water up to the base of neck. Allow the water to flow out at a slow rate. Collect this water in the empty measuring cylinder kept below the resonator. When resonance is. A loud sound is heard, stop the flow of water and record the volume (V) of water collected.
4. Repeat the above procedure for other tuning forks including the fork of unknown frequency.
