Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease between men who had been exposed to asbestos and those who had not. A case-control study was conducted among men aged 60 years or older who had been employed in asbestos-related occupations before age 60. The prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease was compared between cases (men with a history of myocardial infarction) and controls (men without a history of myocardial infarction). The results showed that the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease was significantly higher in cases than in controls. This suggests that exposure to asbestos may be associated with an increased risk of developing coronary artery disease.

There is a growing body of evidence that suggests that the use of a computer-based system for the management of a business can lead to a significant increase in productivity and efficiency. This is particularly true in the case of the use of a computer-based system for the management of a business's financial data. Such a system can help to ensure that the data is accurate and up-to-date, and can also help to identify areas where the business is over-spending or under-spending. This can lead to a more efficient use of resources and a more profitable business overall.
