Anyone Can Cook, Even the Rowers

TITLE

INTRO

They tell me my name is French for "oarsman," that I have been rowing my way uphill since I was born. They told me to stay in my lane, that I had no idea what I was doing with food. They didn't believe me about my sense of taste or smell, that I knew that one day I would be a chef until it happened.

It was a crisp fall day. Leaves scattered across the road, cushioning the footsteps of people bringing fresh baguettes home for dinner or breakfast. It is hard not to fall in love with a city like this, the way every building, street, and light can hold the potential of romance.

I saw him from the street. A garbage boy, clumsy and awkward with untied shoes and bright red hair. He was a walking disaster, unobservant of the world or people around him, barely able to hold a knife or spice a dish. You either thought him a fool, or you pitied him for not being the things he should have been. And yet, by the end of the day, he would be my closest friend who would help me achieve my dreams.

My friend and I could not speak to each other, but we had our own way of communicating, connected only by the foods we made, the relationship we learned to build in the kitchen. Most people would credit my success to impressing a food critic, making a country dish of sliced courgettes and aubergines stewed to perfection, but that is only half truth. I had the help of my patient friends, inherent sense of smell, and plenty of mistakes along the way. They call me a rower, and so I continue to row.

Holdstein and Bleich compile a volume that cuts across the grain of current orthodoxy These editors and contributors argue that it is fundamental in humanistic scholarship to take account of the personal and collective experiences of scholars researchers critics and teachers They contend that humanistic inquiry cannot develop successfully at this time without reference to the varieties of subjective inter subjective and collective experience of teachers and researchers In composition studies they point out an important strand of theory has continuously mined the personal experience of individual writers where they stand even in a destabilised sense of that idea Such substantive accounts of the inner academic life provide appropriate and rich contexts for further study and analysis With this volume then these scholars move us to explore the intersections of the social with subjectivity with voice ideology and culture and to consider the roles of these in the work of academics who study writing and literature Taken together the essays in this collection carry forward the idea that the personal the candidly subjective and inter subjective must be part of the subject of study in humanities scholarship They propose an understanding of the personal in scholarship that is more helpful because more clearly anchored in human experience
