

PART I

Introduction

This introductory chapter provides the social context necessary to examine the personal situations of women who are victims of crime, women who are convicted and sentenced for their crimes, and women who work in various agencies of the criminal justice system. That gender matters is the basic theme. This social context is the patriarchal society in which males are dominant and females experience oppression in a variety of ways. In recent years, there has been a backlash both against rehabilitation and against many aspects of the feminist movement. That this backlash is played out against poor women of color and especially women in trouble with the law are major arguments of this book. This is not to say that women, including women of color, have not made inroads into the professional worlds of corrections and criminal law, and not to overlook the many new initiatives within the criminal justice system to bring gender-specific programming for girls and women.

As a starting point in a book that considers the many roles that women play within and across the criminal justice system, we turn to various perspectives on gender, race, and class, drawing on insights from feminist theory and the writings of feminist criminologists. Feminist perspectives, which focus on explaining and responding to the oppressed position of women in society, have much to offer to our understanding of the functioning of criminal justice institutions. Chapter 1, accordingly, offers a brief overview of relevant insights provided in the feminist and feminist criminological literature. Because they place gender at the forefront of the discourse, feminist teachings and scholarship can serve as a foundation for the later chapters on crime, delinquency, and professional roles.
