The Meaningful Writing Project Michele Eodice, Anne Ellen Geller, Neal Lerner, 2017-03-01 In the face of the continuing discourse of crisis in US education, The Meaningful Writing Project offers readers an affirming story of writing in higher education that shares students' experiences in their own voices. In presenting the results of a three-year study consisting of surveys and interviews of university seniors and their faculty across three diverse institutions, authors Michele Eodice, Anne Ellen Geller, and Neal Lerner consider students' perceptions of their meaningful writing experiences, the qualities of those experiences, and instructors' perspectives on assignment design and delivery. This study confirms that meaningful assignments offer students opportunities to engage with instructors, peers, and texts and are relevant to past experiences and passions as well as to future aspirations and identities. Meaningful writing occurs across majors in both required and elective courses and beyond students' years at college. Additionally, the study makes clear that faculty across the curriculum devote significant care and attention to creating writing assignments that support student learning as they understand writing performance to be a developmental process connected to overall cognitive and social development, student engagement with learning, and success in a wide variety of disciplines and professions. The Meaningful Writing Project provides writing center directors, WPAs, other composition scholars, and all faculty interested in teaching and learning with writing an unprecedented look into the writing projects students find meaningful.

Model: Problem-Oriented Learning and Project Work Anders Siig Andersen, Simon B. Heilesen, 2014-10-25 This book describes the pedagogical foundations of the Roskilde Model of education and educational design. It presents knowledge about how principles of problem oriented interdisciplinary and participant directed project work may serve as a basis for planning and applying educational activities at institutions of higher learning. It discusses the dilemmas, problems and diverging views that have challenged the model, provoking experiments and reforms that have helped develop practice without compromising the key principles. The Roskilde Model combines various student centered learning concepts into a nexus providing the foundation for a consistent pedagogical practice that is strongly supported by the educational structure and the academic profile of the university. A complex concept, the Roskilde Model refers to three different aspects. The first one is problem oriented interdisciplinary and participant directed project work (PPL). At Roskilde University, half of all study activities are organized in line with this particular pedagogical approach. The second aspect the model refers to is the organizing of university education on the basis of four interdisciplinary bachelor programmes. These programmes are part of the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences and humanistic technological sciences and give admission to two year master programmes in a broad range of disciplines. The third aspect the model refers to is the interdisciplinary academic and educational profile of the university.

A Practical Guide to Research Project Reporting Isaac Olakanmi Abimbola, 2023-03-28 The purpose of this book is to reduce undergraduate and postgraduate students' frustrations in knowing what to write in their research project proposals and reports. In addition, as the number of students under supervision by a given supervisor keeps on increasing from year to year and the time to do this becomes limited, this booklet would assist in reducing the burden on supervisors where students want guidance provided for them from the horse's mouth. It is becoming increasingly difficult to provide the same piece of information to several research project students repeatedly. With this booklet, supervisors should now be free to concentrate their supervisory efforts on substantive issues in students' research. This booklet is an attempt to document and provide to all students in Education and other social sciences the authors' rich research knowledge and experiences as a research project supervisor at undergraduate and postgraduate levels. He was a former Departmental Research Project Coordinator, Postgraduate Programme Coordinator, a Lecturer of Introduction to Research Methods in Education and Ph D Thesis Proposal Seminar, Faculty of Education, Representative on the Board of the Postgraduate School, Head of Department, Pioneer Director, Centre for Research Development and In House Training, Dean Postgraduate School and Pioneer, Faculty of Education, Research Manager. In this booklet I combined the treatment of format conceptual and practical issues pertaining to each chapter of a research project or thesis in education This is to clarify for student researchers what each chapter should contain I assumed that a typical empirical research project report in education contains about five chapters I therefore described the contents of each chapter in a manner that will make it possible for students to start their projects with minimal reliance on the supervisors the moment they have chosen a research topic with the guidance of their supervisors In addition I describe the supplementary but equally important parts of a research project report namely references or bibliography and appendices I paid a special attention to the writing and therefore typing instructions that will make any Department in a Faculty or College of Education accept the research project or thesis report I strongly recommend this book to all regular and part time student researchers in Universities and Colleges of Education who have interest in knowing how to write successfully their research project or thesis reports I also recommend the book to supervisors that are looking for a break from students guidance problems I wish you a happy reading
