

During the 1980s, a coalition of environmental groups and other social scientists (including John C. Emland) argued that the EPA's approach to assessing environmental risks was flawed. They argued that the EPA's approach was too narrow, focusing only on the physical and chemical properties of pollutants, and that it failed to consider the broader context of human health and the environment. This led to the development of the "Precautionary Principle," which states that where there are threats of serious or irreversible damage, lack of full scientific certainty shall not be used as a reason for postponing cost-effective measures to prevent degradation of the environment.

How important is the social factor in the development of the individual? The social factor is important in the development of the individual, but it is not the only factor. The individual also has a role to play in his own development. The social factor is important in the development of the individual, but it is not the only factor. Industrialization in Nineteenth Century Europe Tom Kemp, 2014-06-06 Written for the layman as well as the economic historian this famous and much used book not only presents a general synthesis of the pattern of European industrialisation it also provides material for a comparative study by illustrating in separate case studies the specific characteristics of development in Britain France Germany Russia and Italy Edith Stein Essays on Woman Edith Stein, 2012-10-30 To help celebrate the fourth centenary of the birth of St John of the Cross in 1542 Edith Stein received the task of preparing a study of his writings She uses her skill as a philosopher to enter into an illuminating reflection on the difference between the two symbols of cross and night Pointing out how entering the night is synonymous with carrying the cross she provides a condensed presentation of John's thought on the active and passive nights as discussed in The Ascent of Mount Carmel and The Dark Night All of this leads Edith to speak of the glory of resurrection that the soul shares through a unitive contemplation described chiefly in The Living Flame of Love In the summer of 1942 the Nazis without warrant took Edith away The nuns found the manuscript of this profound study lying open in her room Because of the Nazis merciless persecution of Jews in Germany Edith Stein traveled discreetly across the border into Holland to find safe harbor in the Carmel of Echt But the Nazi invasion of Holland in 1940 again put Edith in danger The cross weighed down heavily as those of Jewish birth were harassed Sr Teresa Benedicta of the Cross's superiors then assigned her a task they thought would take her mind off the threatening situation The fourth centenary of the birth of St John of the Cross 1542 was approaching and Edith could surely contribute a valuable study for the celebration It is no surprise that in view of her circumstances she discovered in the subject of the cross a central viewpoint for her study. A subject like this enabled her to grasp John's unity of being as expressed in his life and works. Using her training in phenomenology she helps the reader apprehend the difference in the symbolic character of cross and night and why the night symbol prevails in John. She clarifies that detachment is designated by him as a night through which the soul must pass to reach union with God and points out how entering the night is equivalent to carrying the cross. Finally in a fascinating way Edith speaks of how the heart or fountainhead of personal life, an inmost region, is present in both God and the soul and that in the spiritual marriage this inmost region is surrendered by each to the other. She observes that in the soul seized by God in contemplation all that is mortal is consumed in the fire of eternal love. The spirit as spirit is destined for immortal being to move through fire along a path from the cross of Christ to the glory of his resurrection. Book includes two photos and fully linked index.
