What is a thesis-driven essay?

A thesis driven essay is a type of essay that is often associated with the humanities, such as English and History, but can also be seen in many different fields (including the sciences!). Since thesis-driven essays are prevalent across disciplines, you may see them referred to by different names: an analytical paper, an expository paper, or an argumentative paper.¹ The main purpose of a thesis-driven essay is to make an argument or prove a point. This “point” is explicitly articulated in your thesis statement, and the rest of your paper is structured around building evidence to support that thesis statement.²

Basic Structure of a Thesis-Driven Essay

Introduction

The purpose of an introduction is to gain the reader’s attention, provide necessary background information, and establish the essay’s thesis, or main idea.³ Depending on your rhetorical context, you can get the reader’s attention through a number of different methods. A quote or an anecdote may be appropriate in less formal writing whereas formal academic writing may start off with a statement of the significance of the work. Next, begin providing context for the reader, introducing broad topics that will be explored in the essay and then narrowing towards your thesis statement which is your main claim.⁴ Typically, the thesis will appear at the end of the introduction.

Out-of-school youth have been a growing concern in the past decades. Compared to youth that receive proper education, those who do not stay in school are more likely to engage in risky events, such as smoking, illegal drug use, binge drinking, and many more (Lerman 1).⁶ In addition, youth who do not attend schools are not equipped with the necessary skill sets to get employed or earn income (which means they will not be able to sustain themselves), as well as the essential lessons that are needed in life, such as

Writing the Classroom Stephen E. Neaderhiser, 2022-11-21 Writing the Classroom explores how faculty compose and use pedagogical documents to establish classroom expectations and teaching practices as well as to articulate the professional identities they perform both inside and outside the classroom The contributors to this unique collection employ a wide range of methodological frameworks to demonstrate how pedagogical genres even ones as seemingly straightforward as the class syllabus have lives extending well beyond the classroom as they become part of how college teachers represent their own academic identities advocate for pedagogical values and negotiate the many external forces that influence the act of teaching Writing the Classroom shines a light on genres that are often treated as two dimensional with purely functional purposes arguing instead that genres like assignment prompts course proposals teaching statements and policy documents play a fundamental role in constructing the classroom and the broader pedagogical enterprise within academia Writing the Classroom calls on experienced teachers and faculty administrators to critically consider their own engagement with pedagogical genres and offers graduate students and newer faculty insight into the genres that they may only now be learning to inhabit as they seek to establish their personal teacherly identities It showcases the rhetorical complexity of the genres written in the service of pedagogy not only for students but also for the many other audiences within academia that have a role in shaping the experience of teaching Contributors Michael Albright Lora Arduser Lesley Erin Bartlett Logan Bearden Lindsay Clark Dana Comi Zack K De Piero Matt Dowell Amy Ferdinandt Stolley Mark A Hannah Megan Knight Laura R Micciche Cindy Mooty Dustin Morris Kate Navickas Kate Nesbit Jim Nugent Lori A Ostergaard Cynthia Pengilly Jessica Rivera Mueller Christina Saidy Megan Schoen Virginia Schwarz Christopher Toth

Reading, Writing, and the Humanities Jo Ray McCuen, Anthony C. Winkler, 1991 Reading Writing and the Humanities is organized around eight classic enduring themes and features extensive reading and writing for students In selecting philosophy history and literature as the primary categories for grouping the readings this text retained this early meaning of humanities as consisting of subjects whose emphasis is mainly human centered Our chapter titles are variations on some profound and timeless questions that writers and thinkers in the humanities have grappled with for centuries while the subtitles declare the underlying issue that is the featured theme Reading Writing and the Humanities will stir awake the analytical and critical minds of students

The Metaphor of the Monster Keith Moser, Karina Zelaya, 2020-10-15 The Metaphor of the Monster offers fresh perspectives and a variety of disciplinary approaches to the ever broadening field of monster studies The eclectic group of contributors to this volume represents areas of study not generally considered under the purview of monster studies including world literature classical studies philosophy ecocriticism animal ethics and gender studies Combining historical overviews with contemporary and global outlooks this volume recontextualizes the monstrous entities that have always haunted the human imagination in the age of the Anthropocene It also invites reflection on new forms of monstrosity in an era epitomized by an unprecedented deluge of misinformation Uniting researchers from varied academic backgrounds in a common effort to challenge the monstrous labels that have historically been imposed upon the Other this book endeavors above all to bring the monster out of the shadows and into the light of moral consideration

Writing in Film Studies, from Professional Practice to Practical Pedagogy Bryan Mead, 2024-01-09 A common refrain heard from instructors in offices across the world is that students have a hard time producing quality written discourse This is no different in the world of film studies where many undergraduate students struggle to cogently discuss the films they watch in class How can film instructors help students become better writers This book answers this question by first uncovering the disciplinary expectations we have for students and then offering strategies to explicitly teach those expectations in the classroom This book examines and identifies the disciplinary conventions of professional film studies discourse along with the expectations we have for student writing in undergraduate film courses What becomes clear from this analysis is that the pedagogical expectations we have for students are aligned with and shaped by professional writing in the discipline It helps to uncover the argument types instructors take for granted and helps those teaching undergraduate students not only to know what those expectations are but also how to use that
