

APPLICATION OF LINEAR PROGRAMMING ON PROMOTION PROBLEMS

This thesis deals with the application of linear programming to solving problems in the area of publicity. The emergence of linear programming is a consequence of the development of the so-called operational research. Linear programming is intended for the allocation of scarce resources in order to achieve optimal results. The aim of this thesis is to show that many problems in the field of advertising can be solved by using mathematical programs on the computer. The thesis consists of four chapters. The second chapter will briefly describe the linear programming history, and will list the people who contributed most to linear programming. It will be defined and explained the concept of linear programming. The basic settings of mathematical modeling of problems will be explained, and the areas of possible application of linear programming will be specified. The standard formulation of the linear programming problem will also be displayed. The third chapter will explain the WinQSB computer program and the module for linear and integral linear programming. The most important procedures for resolving mathematical models of economic problems through this program will be described in detail. The input of the input data, the possibility of the subsequent modification of the set conditions, the storage of the model and the results for later use, and the like will be displayed.

The fourth chapter will show the resolution of selected examples of advertising problems using the WinQSB computer program, more precisely its module for linear and integral linear programming. The eight selected examples will be elaborated and detailed description of the process of obtaining a mathematical model, as well as the process of

How requirements development could support design of effective and resource-efficient offerings Sara Nilsson, 2017-11-15 What a company offers its customers has to fulfil several different needs desires constraints which can originate from multiple different sources that affect the offering throughout its life cycle All these criteria have to come together and be translated into statements that can support the designer s understanding of the offering s purpose This translation is done through a requirements development process to provide a controlled process to define statements that describe what the offering is supposed to fulfil This research provides insights on key challenges and success factors in requirements development to support the design of effective and resource efficient offerings Namely it identifies crucial sources and aspects to be considered and a requirements development process demonstrating how to overcome identified challenges By getting the requirements right from the beginning sub optimisation and unnecessary time and risks can be avoided The consideration of accurate sources and aspects is considered to be one of the most important factors for the successful design of offerings It is also in the earliest phases of design that is to say requirements development where one has the greatest possibility to affect the environmental impact of the offering What is missing however is sufficient and appropriate support in industry on how to do so The gap between the three areas of effectiveness and resource efficiency design of integrated offerings and requirements development has been investigated Results are based on findings in the literature and in industry identified primarily by qualitative studies In the research 15 different companies have been included through a number of interviews and discussions Key sources and aspects to consider in the requirements development process are identified along with challenges and success factors that can be utilised to overcome the identified challenges This research s final results include an adapted requirements development process that considers the earlier mentioned sources and aspect challenges and success factors Such a requirements development process should support the design of effective and resource efficient offerings remained poorly understood and this will be the first volume dedicated solely to this issue. Nine papers aim to reach a better appreciation of relationships between writing systems than has been possible in previous research through an interdisciplinary dialogue that takes account of both features of the writing systems and the contextual factors affecting the way in which writing was passed on. Each individual contribution furthers this aim by presenting the latest research on the Aegean scripts demonstrating the great advances in our understanding of script relations that are possible through such detailed and innovative studies.

The Supporting Role of Logistics during the Early Stage of Retail

Internationalisation Linnea Haag, 2019-03-08 Retail internationalisation refers to the establishment of retailers into foreign sales markets and is an important success factor for many retail chains. Logistics has been acknowledged as an important prerequisite and key component of retail internationalisation, enabling physical distribution to new foreign markets as well as ensuring customer satisfaction in terms of on-time delivery and product availability. Despite the recognition of logistics, logistics managers struggle to adapt their logistics organisation and operations in order to efficiently and effectively support retail internationalisation due to the complexity of operating in multiple markets. Previous research seldom mentions how logistics supports retail internationalisation, especially when retail chains are at the beginning of their retail internationalisation journey. By exploring the supporting role of logistics during the early stage of retail internationalisation, retailers can better understand how logistics organisation and operations can be organised in order to successfully expand into foreign sales markets. Therefore, the purpose of this licentiate thesis is to explore the supporting role of logistics during the early stage of retail internationalisation. This licentiate thesis is based on an abductive multiple case study approach that combines empirical data with literature in an iterative process in order to explore the supporting role of logistics during the early stage of retail internationalisation. The selected case companies were three large-sized Swedish retail chains that have recently established themselves into nearby foreign sales markets. The findings of this licentiate thesis suggest that logistics plays both a reactive and a proactive supporting role during the early stage of retail internationalisation. The reactive supporting role refers to logistics that adapts to predetermined conditions set by the retail company's top management team. As a reactive supporter, the logistics organisation is typically involved at an operational level and scales up its logistics operations in order to supply multiple markets. Beyond its reactive role, logistics can also play a proactive supporting role. This refers to its involvement at a strategic level within the retail company where it can influence the conditions of retail internationalisation. When logistics is involved more proactively, its operations can become better aligned with the other company operations involved in retail internationalisation. Furthermore, proactive logistics support enables more efficient and effective logistics that can better cope with increased complexity as well as more effectively keep track of logistics costs. In addition to these findings, the importance of top management has been identified as a key aspect of proactive logistics support. More specifically, logistics competence within the top management team enables logistics to be prioritised at a strategic level and to be better integrated during retail internationalisation including during individual establishments into new markets The findings also suggest that the importance of logistics increases over time during retail internationalisation The more markets the retailer enters the more important efficient logistics becomes in order to deal with both complexity and logistics costs By involving proactive logistics from the start of retail internationalisation retail chains can more efficiently and effectively establish into and operate within foreign sales markets which in turn supports a sustainable retail internationalisation One of the main academic contributions of this licentiate thesis has been to study logistics in the specific context of retail internationalisation which has previously not been researched in any great detail In addition logistics has often been studied as a static aspect but in this thesis it is studied from a dynamic perspective in order to understand how its supporting role changes over time during the early stage of retail internationalisation Another important contribution is that the role of logistics has been studied from both a strategic and an operational level as previous research has mostly focused on the strategic level of logistics related to retail internationalisation In terms of practical contributions this licentiate thesis clarifies the logistics characteristics and supply chain capabilities that support the early stage of retail internationalisation This licentiate thesis can also help practitioners to better prepare their logistics organisation and logistics operations for a future retail internationalisation as well as helping them to avoid making logistical mistakes during the early stage of retail internationalisation
