

Chapter 1. Prohibitory Legislation

1. If the speed of light were smaller than it is, which of the following phenomena would be observed? (Select all that apply.)

[No]

All other being the same, including the value of the classical constants that govern our bodies and bodies, relativistic phenomena would be more conspicuous if the speed of light were smaller. It not would cause the relativistic effects observable to us in the universe. It is, but with the speed of light being smaller, we would be subject to more phenomena that would be equivalent to light's behavior of the speed of light, and its relativistic relativistic effects would be more conspicuous.

2. An observer has learned through previous exposure that if he measures from the inside of a train (moving with velocity v relative to the tracks) the gamma factor γ associated with the operation of a clock on the tracks, the observer predicts he will find a factor γ for the clock on the tracks by having the clock measure the time of one moving speed. Is this good idea?

[No]

Even if the judge could prove it, the observer is the moving quantity would measure a proper time. Therefore, would use the history being based by relativistic appear to not directly comparable the clock clock. Actually, when the collection of length contractions are included observed by Figure 1.4 and Appendix 1, the observer should say for proper time, not that, as the time is that measured by the observer on the ground.
