

Abstract: The authors have found that the in vitro and in vivo effects of the 1981-1982 influenza pandemic virus (A/England/1981) are similar to those of the 1968 Hong Kong pandemic virus (A/Hong Kong/1968). These results are of interest because they suggest that pandemic influenza is caused by a single influenza A virus type, rather than by several different viruses. While our results are consistent with this hypothesis, additional studies are required to confirm our data and to determine the role of the 1981-1982 pandemic virus in the 1968 Hong Kong pandemic.

Special cell calls, always after extensive stress for health and, most importantly, for those in the most at-risk areas for infection and subsequent serious illness. It says the Nigerian government intended to call such high-risk countries "early." But critics say that, with a government administration in power known for its corruption and repression, the government will "outreach" the most vulnerable people, while neglecting the health care system. It says the Nigerian government will "outreach" the most vulnerable people, while neglecting the health care system. It says the Nigerian government will "outreach" the most vulnerable people, while neglecting the health care system.

With further studies it may be possible to find a specific treatment method for the treatment of the disease. The results of the study are promising and may lead to the development of a new treatment method for the disease.
