Cells, Tissues, and Organs:

Cells, tissues, and organs work together in plant and animal organ systems to enable survival. The structure of cells determines their specific functions. Cells combine to form tissues, which have specialised functions. Tissues then organise to form organs, which carry out specific tasks necessary for survival. Cells make up tissues, tissues make up organs, and organs make up organ systems. The function of an organ system depends on the integrated activity of its organs. For instance, digestive system organs cooperate to process food.
