

Chapter 1 Study Guide

Use this study guide to prepare for the quizzes for PY100 Introduction to Psychology. The guide refers to the required textbook for this course (Psychological Science). Each below either notes the page number where the answer to the question can be found or indicates that the material will only be provided from the lectures. For example, item 1 below asks "what is the definition of psychology?" (4) "(4)" indicates that the answer to this question is on page 4. Content in bold typeface is also relevant for the final exam for the course.

1. What is psychology the study of? (4)
 - study of mental activity
 - philosophical roots
 - scientific discipline began around 1870s in Germany
2. From what does the term psychology derive from (i.e., its word origin)? (lecture)
 - from two Greek words: "psyche" for mind and "logos" for study
3. What is "mental activity?" (lecture)
 - general term
 - conscious effort to think, problem solve, remembering, and related activities, but does not attempt to link these activities with physiological functions
4. Define psychological science (5). How does this differ from "psychology?" (lecture)
 - psychological science: the study, through research, of mind, brain, and behavior
 - "through research"-study, survey, experiments, tests
 - "-ological"-the study of; done through science, not just theoretical
 - "mind, brain, and behavior"-what do the parts of the brain do?; mind: emotional responses, remembering numbers/what you had for lunch yesterday; carefully measuring behavior we observe (how did a person say what they say, what emotional state were they in?)
 - excludes intuition, believing, and causes based on anything else but evidence
 - psychologists generally seek to understand mental activity (both normal and abnormal), the biological basis of that activity, how people change as they grow older, how people vary in response to social settings, and how people acquire healthy and unhealthy behaviors
5. Define the "mind" and the "brain." How are they different? (5, lecture)
 - brain: hardware; organ in the head that serves as part of central nervous system, with the spinal cord, carry out biological processes for physiological, sensory, emotional and cognitive processes
 - mind: software; metaphysical construct, used to describe mental activities, especially when difficult to link to brain processes. Functions of the mind (e.g., memory, perception) are ultimately dependent upon biological brain processes
 - biological psychology: link mind and brain
 - Phineas Gage: tapping iron went through his head; survived; dramatic personality changes
6. On page 5, the authors restrict behavior to humans and animals. However, invertebrate behavior is also studied (lecture)
 - behavior: observable actions of an organism
 - observable actions: something we can actually see someone doing
 - behaviors exclusive to humans: debating philosophy, performing surgery

Mosby's Radiation Therapy Study Guide and Exam Review Leia Levy, 2010-11-22 Reinforce your understanding of radiation therapy and prepare for the Registry exam. Mosby's Radiation Therapy Study Guide and Exam Review is both a study companion for Principles and Practice of Radiation Therapy by Charles Washington and Dennis Leaver and a superior review for the certification exam offered by the American Registry for Radiologic Technology (ARRT). An easy to read format simplifies study by presenting information in concise bullets and tables. Over 1 000 review questions are included. Written by radiation therapy expert Leia Levy with contributions by other radiation therapy educators and clinicians, this study tool provides everything you need to prepare for the ARRT Radiation Therapy Certification Exam. This title includes additional digital media when purchased in print format. For this digital book edition, media content is not included. Over 1000 multiple choice questions in Registry format are provided in the text, allowing you to both study and simulate the actual exam experience. Focus questions and key information in tables make it easy to find and remember information for the exam. Review exercises reinforce learning with a variety of question formats to fit different learning styles. Questions are organized by ARRT content categories and are available in study mode with immediate feedback after each question or in exam mode which simulates the test taking experience in a timed environment with ARRT exam style questions.

Climate Change Adaptation for Health and Social Services Rae Walker, Wendy Mason, 2015-09 Climate Change Adaptation for Health and Social Services addresses concerns from the health and community services sector, including local government, about how to respond to climate change and its impacts on communities. What should an intervention framework for the community based health and social services sector contain and how can it complement an organisation's core values, role and work programs? What current direct and indirect impacts of climate change are most relevant to organisations and the communities they serve? Which population groups are most vulnerable to climate change and what are the impacts on them? Above all, what can be done to reduce the current risks from climate change to clients, communities and organisations? Written by expert researchers and practitioners, this book presents existing research, innovative practice and useful tools to support organisations taking practical steps towards adaptation to the impacts of climate change on people. It examines the evidence of climate change impacts on six of the most vulnerable population groups: people with disability, older people, women and children, Aboriginal people, rural people and people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds, as well as discussing effective interventions. Other key issues covered include health and social impacts of climate change adaptation.

mitigation climate change communication organisational adaptation and a case study of innovation illustrating some of the book's themes Accessible informative and incorporating extensive evidence and experience Climate Change Adaptation for Health and Social Services is relevant for anyone within the health and community services sector concerned about climate change and its impacts on their community
