

The Cobra

A cobra is a deadly creature: its venom is extremely potent and toxic. Cobras are classified as reptiles, they lay eggs and live, primarily, on land although they can live in water for extended periods of time.

Appearance

King Cobras are the longest or longest snake among all the venomous snakes in the world. The average length of their body is about 13 feet, but there are records of 18-foot-long king cobras. Although they are long and heavy animals, their movements are agile. Whilst they can kill almost anyone in their path, king cobras mostly prefer other snakes as their food. These dangerous creatures have pale-yellow bands on the olive green, tan, or black colour background. The underside is usually light coloured with a hint of yellow.

Menacing Traits

King cobras can reach 18 feet in length, making them the longest of all venomous snakes. When confronted, they can raise up to one-third of their bodies straight off the ground and still move forward to attack. For this reason, they are considered one of the most aggressive snakes in the world. They will also flare out their iconic hoods and emit a bone-chilling hiss that sounds almost like a growling dog.

Venom

The venom of king cobra is mainly made up of proteins and polypeptides of neurotoxins and cardio-toxins. When they bite the prey with their 1.5-centimetre-long fangs, the venom gets injected into the prey animal. Consequently, the central nervous system of its prey is paralysed, and the cardiovascular system is attacked, as well. Subsequently, envenomation causes many problems including renal failure, vision problems, and finally the victim is taken into a coma, to follow up with death!

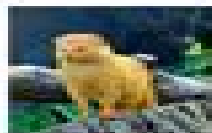

Habitat

King cobras live mainly in the rain forests and plains of India, southern China, and Southeast Asia, and their colouring can vary greatly from region to region. They are comfortable in the trees, on land, and in water, feeding mainly on other snakes, venomous and nonvenomous. Furthermore, they will also eat lizards, eggs, and small mammals. They are the only snakes in the world that build nests for their eggs, which they guard ferociously until the hatchlings emerge.

Amazing Fact!

The main predator to the king cobra is the mongoose because the mongoose is immune to its poison.

Did you know?

King cobras may be best known as the species of choice for the snake charmers of South Asia. Although cobras can hear, they are actually deaf to ambient noises, sensing ground vibrations instead.
