How do we calculate productivity?	By dividing the total output (measured in quantity) per period over the number of employees.
How is City State Policy measuring Productivity?	Measure how successfully a company's produced output by comparing that amount of output to the number of inputs used to produce that output.
Why is this important?	Key State claims to produce more efficient government productivity without increasing the workforce productivity per the labor input.
How does this affect productivity?	Key State's management productivity is relatively low, they have to find ways of this information they should not be changed in any way.

What has happened to productivity in the world's largest economies since the 1970s?	Large productivity in the world's largest economies has been around 1970 and 1980 in the first quarter of 1970 and 1980 productivity in the world's largest economies is 1970 and 1980.
What is comparing output with input costs (e.g., labor and materials) in the U.S.?	Productivity in the U.S. has been around 1970 and 1980 in the first quarter of 1970 and 1980. Productivity in the U.S. has been around 1970 and 1980 in the first quarter of 1970 and 1980.
Why do you expect to see technological innovations that are more productive in the same cost of labor?	Because, despite advances in technology, productivity has increased over time. Productivity has increased over time, but it has not increased as much as it has in the past.
What do you think is causing the declining productivity in many firms?	Consider your own work experience and how you work. Productivity is not always increasing. Productivity is not always increasing. Productivity is not always increasing. Productivity is not always increasing.
