Trophic Organization in Coastal Systems Robert J. Livingston, 2002-12-23 Derived from an unprecedented research effort covering over 70 field years of field data in a series of studies Trophic Organization in Coastal Systems represents an alternative approach to coastal research that has been successfully applied to coastal resource management issues This unique book is based upon a sequence of long term interdisciplinary studies of a series of coastal regions in the NE Gulf of Mexico that include nutrient loading habitat definition quantified collections of organisms from microbes to fishes and the determination of the trophic organization that defines the processes that shape the productivity of these areas A multidisciplinary team of marine scientists chemists physical oceanographers geologists hydrologists engineers experimental biologists and taxonomists have created a singular database of changes in a series of Gulf of Mexico coastal systems This field information together with field and laboratory experimentation is integrated with the scientific literature to advance our understanding of how coastal food webs work The central focus is on the relationship of primary production in the form of species specific phytoplankton communities with associated food webs of coastal systems and the relationship of tropho dynamic processes to long term changes natural and polluted in such areas The impacts of phytoplankton blooms on trophic organization is elucidated The author a renowned marine scientist provides detailed knowledge of the processes that drive coastal ecosystems He presents an in depth discussion of a hierarchy of cyclical periods associated with the formation and development of aquatic food webs Trophic Organization in Coastal Systems will be particularly useful to those involved in research related to the importance of aquatic food webs to an understanding of how aquatic systems function The principles and processes of trophic organization presented here can serve as a valuable model for research in other regions of the world

Ecosystems and Human Well-Being Millennium Ecosystem Assessment (Program). Sub-global Assessments Working Group, 2005-12-14 One of the major innovations of the Millennium Ecosystem Assessment is the incorporation of local and regional assessments 33 in all in a global portrait of the planet's health It is the first global assessment of ecosystems to include not only a diversity of ecosystems but to draw on a wide range of cultural orientations and intellectual traditions including those of indigenous peoples The Sub global Assessments Working Group integrated information from multiple sources and found that biophysical factors such as land use change climate change and variability pollution and invasive species have a significant effect on human well being across cultures For example in places where there are no other social safety nets diminished human well being tends to increase immediate dependence on ecosystem services which can damage the capacity of those local ecosystems which in turn appears to increase the probability of natural disaster or conflict Representing the baseline and framework for ongoing assessments of ecosystem and human well being on a variety of scales around the world Multiscale Assessments provides students researchers and policy makers with the most comprehensive methodology for assessing ecosystems at local national and regional scales
