The Miners From Beringen Reinout Van Den Bergh:

The miners from Beringen, 2014 Thousands of miners lived in the mine housing estate in Beringen in Belgian Limburg The mine permeated the estate The word mine was mentioned on street nameplates caf windows and on the church wall From the start of the 20th century every day thousands of miners extracted coal from the ground Daily they exchanged daylight for dark mine shafts In their spare time they got together during sporting events and in the theatre church mosque and the caf Here Reinout van den Bergh took his photographs in 1981 With his camera he was part of the community He joined the miners into the bathing rooms and into their homes and followed them underground He zoomed in on their black stained faces recorded their daily rituals and photographed the dangerous work with which they earned their bread For a while he lived above the Turkish caf Vatan which means home During his stay he made friends for life Reinout became intrigued by the hierarchical structure within the mining estate as well as by the fact that life and work went hand in hand there One of the places where the contradictions were most obvious was the main entrance of the mine across from Caf Modern and adjacent to the park where the director lived in his luxurious villa
