of Chinese Immigrant Families Shijing Xu,2017-06-28 This book introduces the concept of reciprocal educational learning among cultures with very different historical and philosophical origins The concept of reciprocal learning grows out of a four year study of immigrant Chinese family narrative experiences in a Western context This book captures the lived moments of such transitional lives both in and out of school settings to demonstrate why a child would appear and disappear from different caregivers purview Through the narrative lens of student and family life the study illustrates the intersection of Confucian and Western philosophies of education and how their interaction creates complications as well as benefits for both traditions hence the idea of reciprocal learning When the Pain Remains Mary Buchanan,2013-01-02 INTRODUCTION

Have you ever heard of a bean bus Well it was a one way ticket to New York for my family when I was a young girl growing up in dire poverty in Alabama during the 1950s While I felt quite isolated many times thousands of families from Alabama Florida and other Southern states caught rides to Upstate New York chasing the chance to make enough money to feed and clothe their families As I begin my story in a hospital during the 1990s it isnt the beginning of my story It isnt even the end No my first reflection was the initiation for this project the death of my mother Though it is a cliché life really is what happens while were busy making plans It wasnt until my dear mommas life was ending that I took the time to recall how we got to that small sorrow filled hospital room In the early summer of 1959 I was a young black girl with four younger siblings a mother who was barely putting food on the table for us and a step father who had headed North months earlier in search of a job and money My mother and I had few resources to hold the family together and what we had was drying up quickly Then like an angel my mothers cousin drove into town with promises of a job and a better life just for the summer in Upstate New York picking beans for the season living on a migrant camp After a couple of days our small family boarded a bean bus Barefoot and hungry we wished for little more than enough money to buy food and pay rent when we returned home at the end of the summer However there were different bigger plans for us Situations during that season made it impossible for us to return to Alabama Little did we know our three month visit to New York would last over three decades In fact my mother never returned to the South at all to live Instead she embarked on a life that included divorce more children and entering the federal welfare system Being born to a sixteen year old who hid her baby in the woods because she feared her mother I consider myself a diamond in the rough every family has a diamond solitary I was born for a purpose in my family I believe God knew Mama needed me for what was ahead in her life She gave birth to a son with a rare handicap when I was four years old I was the one who would have to take care of him the one who had to be strong for Mama during her weakness I wrote this book for healing and closure I left behind all the sad memories in this book I wanted to forget the fact my family was on welfare throughout my childhood I wanted to forget the days of going without food I wanted to forget the domestic abuse my mother endured I needed the affirmation that I did not do so badly amidst all the adversity in my life as a child I wanted to forget the pain that remains Letting go of the pain that remains in my life is due largely to my success of breaking the welfare cycle that was once a part of my existence Today I am a better woman because of the hardship I endured This is a story filled with sadness It is with sincere hope that all who read this book will realize there is no greater love than the love of family

Traitors Gerardo Robledo,2012-07-27 In his first book published in the United States Gerardo Robledo presents a dramatic and original story that is sure to raise public consciousness about controversial issues such as the migration of millions of people to developed countries seeking better lives Born in Guadalajara Jalisco Mexico Gerardo has lived through firsthand the experience of being an immigrant in distant lands when in 1996 he traveled to California United States along with his now wife Leticia Juarez Together they have formed a beautiful family with their three sons Gerardo Jr Cesar and Santiago After personally witnessing different cases in which many families suffered from the terrible scourge of separation due to the deportation of one or more family members spouses parents etc Gerardo felt the burning resolve to reveal to the world the barbarity of this pressing problem The legalization of millions of undocumented immigrants currently living in the United States that should not and cannot be ignored any longer Traitors is a heartfelt invitation to unite and to act in the name of the American ideals of justice and freedom www facebook com traitorsthebook

New Perspectives on Mutual Dependency in Care-Giving Asst Prof Adéla Souralová,2015-10-28 Many scholars see caregiving relationships as being based on mutual dependency or interdependency Extensively cited notions of the global care chain or international division of reproductive labour have prepared the ground for analysis of global interdependencies in several domains Souralov considers caregiving to be a formative activity that establishes ties between the concerned actors whose subjectivities are mutually shaped in the daily practice of caregiving With its stress on mutuality in care work this ground breaking book illuminates the new forms of interpersonal interethnic and intergenerational relationships and highlights the mechanisms and processes in which kinship ties are negotiated and reproduced
