

World War I: The Great War

Name _____

cc More than 25 nations became involved in the fighting of World War I, which took place in Europe, the Middle East, and northern Africa. About 65 million soldiers were sent into battle. Nine million were killed and more than 21 million were wounded. People called it the "Great War."

cc World War I developed from two complex causes. One cause was that all European countries had developed conscript armies. All adult male citizens of a nation were required to take military training and could be called into combat at any time. Each country also had a separate war plan and mobilization plan for every possible enemy. If one nation began to get their troops and equipment ready for combat, all others mobilized too.

cc The second basic cause of war was a gradual breakdown of agreements among the European nations. Countries could no longer depend on each other and so became leery of their neighbors. New alliances were made. In particular, France and Russia pledged to help each other in case of war with Germany. In about 1904, Kaiser Wilhelm II decided to make Germany into a great naval power and began building battleships. Britain began getting nervous. In 1907, the Triple Entente was formed between Great Britain, France, and Russia. This was in opposition to the Triple Alliance that had been formed between Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy. Europe was now divided into two opposing military camps.

Fighting took place in northern France and Belgium, where German forces faced the armies of France, Great Britain, Belgium, and the United States. On the Eastern Front, most of the fighting took place in what is now Poland, eastern Germany, Austria, and Russia, where German and Austro-Hungarian troops faced the Russian army.

cc Naval warfare was primarily between Germany and Great Britain. The British navy was the most potent in the world. During the war, the British navy was able to keep the whole German battleship fleet bottled up in the Baltic and North seas. But Germany had built a sizable fleet of U-boats (submarines) and was able to destroy ships and disrupt trade across the Atlantic Ocean.

cc The course of World War I can be divided into three parts, or phases. During phase one, using the Schlieffen Plan, German forces tore through Belgium to attack northern France. The Germans pushed the French almost back to Paris. Britain came into the war, and the combined armies of Great Britain and France stopped the Germans at the Marne River. The Germans then tried another maneuver. They struck northeast toward the English Channel to cut off the flow of supplies coming from England. The Belgians had other ideas. They opened the walls along waterways built to prevent floods, submerged the battlefield, and stopped the attack.
