

HISTORY OF GUIDANCE AND COUNSELLING

HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT OF GUIDANCE AND COUNSELLING IN THE ANCIENT TIME.

It is not certain when guidance and counselling actually started as a field of human endeavor. However, Gibson and Mitchell (1981) report that perhaps the earliest search by man for a counsellor was when Eve reaped the consequences of eating the forbidden fruit in the garden of Eden. Since then man has gone in search of assistance from beings adjusted to be 'superior' whenever confronted with the unknown. From the earliest civilizations, fortune tellers (palmistry, astrology, crystal gazing, graphology, etc) philosophers, priests, diviners and other representatives of the gods and religions have flourished in their role of advising and counselling their adherents.

The historical origins of guidance have also been identified in the thoughts and works of the great Greek philosophy who advocate the development of the individual through education so that each could fulfil role reflecting their greatest potential for themselves and their society. One of such early counselor' was plato who is credited as one of the first to organize psychological insight into systemic theory. In his book, plato not only espoused such question as what make a man virtuous -his inheritance, upbringing or his formal education' (Memo); how can children be most effectively taught'(Republic); and which techniques have been successfully used in persuading and influencing people in their decision and beliefs (Gorgias) but most importantly employed the dramatic methodology in dealing with these question. his dramatic method set the way for and is infact akin to modern day counselling relationship in which the dynamic of human interaction (the characters are as importance as what they say) come into play. Aristotle, one of plato most distinguished student also contribute significant to what has come to be known as psychology through his study of people interesting with their environment and movement was Luis Vives who not only recognized the need to guide each person according to his attitude and aptitude for useful carrers.

Another major impetus in the development of guidance between the 16th and 19th Centuries was the publication of many books which attempted to provide comprehensive information on the professions and how to gain entry into them. Among these were 'The complete Book of trades' (Edward Hazen, 1836), 'A general description of all Trades' (Campbell, 1747), 'The Universal plaza of all the
