5 pages | 1166 words

It is said all the time -- how important it is to take care of others. From taking care of a sibling to helping the homeless on the street; it seems as though society constantly wants to reiterate how important it is to be concerned about the well being of other individuals. However, why is that so important? It clearly helps the person in need, however, what does the person who is trying to help gain from the interaction? How does serving others make a difference in the individuals life? For the answer is quite simple, when someone notices, decides to act or make a difference in a small way, a step is taken to change the world. Volunteering is important because it contributes to the greater good, it acts as a guide to leading a better Christian life and it helps an individual find purpose and meaning. Too often people approach situations asking what is in it for them. By nature, humans are self-centred and self-absorbed. So when it comes time to define what people really want -- what they love, it gets twisted. It is not about the money, praise, recognition or even happiness. It is really about contribution. It is important to understand that everyone has something to contribute because once this realization is made, the greater good is benefited. To further prove this, one can examine the article that the Harvard Business Review recently published; an article that states people should forget about traditional passion and happiness, to put more focus on one's potential to make big things happen. The most notable quote of the article reads, "Happiness comes from the intersection of what you love, what you're good at, and what the world needs. We've been told time and again to keep finding the first. Our schools helped developed the second. It's time we put more thought on the third (Segovia Oliver)." Which is basically stating that it is no longer about the self, but your role as a contributor. For people who work on helping the biggest problems are compensated in the greatest ways; not financially but virtuously. Your attention is shifted from what you want, to what others need and even more so. As a result, individuals become less self-absorbed. They stop dwelling. As ironic as it is, people tend to be happier once they stop trying to find what makes them happy (The Greater Good). People should pursue their efforts not for the pursuit of their own happiness, but by the happiness they bring when helping and contributing to those around. Many people are under the misconception that being called by God is something only missionaries, nuns and other church leaders are called to. However, the Bible says that everyone is called to serve God through the helping of others. In fact one of the vocations in leading a Christian life is the call to serve others. For God granted his people with gifts to use in the service of others, therefore, every single person has something to contribute; even as one of the last lessons Jesus gives he iterates that point....

PDFsam: Allows splitting, merging, and editing PDFs. Foxit Reader: Provides basic PDF viewing and editing capabilities. How do I compress a PDF file?

You can use online tools like Smallpdf, ILovePDF, or desktop software like Adobe Acrobat to compress PDF files without significant quality loss. Compression reduces the file size, making it easier to share and download. Can I fill out forms in a PDF file? Yes, most PDF viewers/editors like Adobe Acrobat, Preview (on Mac), or various online tools allow you to fill out forms in PDF files by selecting text fields and entering information. Are there any restrictions when working with PDFs? Some PDFs might have restrictions set by their creator, such as password protection, editing restrictions, or print restrictions. Breaking these restrictions might require specific software or tools, which may or may not be legal depending on the circumstances and local laws.
