Abstract

Abstract: The impact of the contemporary post-1989 post-communist transition from age to age on the younger adult male cohort for socioeconomic inequalities in health inequalities was investigated. The results are based on the analysis of the 1997-1998 Russian Longitudinal Monitoring Survey (RLMS) data. The results show that the impact of the transition on the health inequalities is not uniform across the different socioeconomic groups. The results also show that the impact of the transition on the health inequalities is not uniform across the different socioeconomic groups.
