

A cartoon illustration of a forest scene. In the background, there is a large green pine tree on the left, a bright yellow sun with rays in the upper left, and several light-colored clouds. The title 'TUTOR STORIES' is written in large, bold, brown letters across the center. Below the title, there are two groups of people. On the left, three people are sitting on the grass; one is holding a book. A speech bubble above them says 'HAHA!'. On the right, three people are sitting on a log. A speech bubble above them says 'UH-OH!'. Above the right group, there is a jagged yellow starburst shape with the word 'AHA!' inside it.

Stories from a Teacher Jonathan Flores, 2012-06-29 On my first official day of teaching I had a backpack with me There was nothing in it I don't really know why I took it Maybe it made me feel more secure the way children sometimes carry around a blanket or a teddy bear I actually hadn't prepared anything I had no lesson plans no ideas about what I might say I had no books no materials I didn't even think I was going to have a job until the day before Since the call I was meeting with all kinds of people to get my paperwork finished and I had no time to prepare Some teachers decorate their classrooms I hadn't bought any posters or decorations The walls of my classroom stood bare I got there about two hours early standing in the middle of the room feeling a little sick Maybe it was something I ate but my stomach spun around inside me But then as I stood there examining the bare walls of the classroom I started to realize Room 203 was my room Mine No one else would teach in this room but yours truly for the next 180 school days Of course I had been in the room a few times before but on this day the room belonged to me My dream had become real The gravity of the whole situation really made me want to throw up excerpt from Stories from a Teacher The book's short stories will resonate with young teachers and high school students NOTE Contains some adult language v 1 102 updated Jan 1 2015
