Abstract

Indignification played its part and that is what there is to our surprise in Twining's candid confession: "I felt that I was being treated as a second-class citizen in Twining's office. I felt that I was being treated as a second-class citizen in Twining's office. I felt that I was being treated as a second-class citizen in Twining's office."

The top half of the bottom section, which is slightly curved, contains a single, large, oval-shaped hole. This hole is the entrance to the tunnel, which is a simple, straight passage that leads to a small, circular chamber at the end. The chamber is also slightly curved and contains a single, large, oval-shaped hole, which is the exit to the tunnel. The entire structure is made of a light-colored, porous material, possibly a type of coral or a similar natural material.
