

- Warp propulsion systems status display. This wall display incorporates a schematic of the warp propulsion system and shows performance of all key system elements.

- Impulse propulsion systems status display. This wall display incorporates a schematic of the impulse propulsion system and shows performance of all key system elements.

- Master situation monitor. This large wall display features a history of the status, showing the location of key systems and hardware, highlighting any elements that are currently operating any condition out of normal. This display also incorporates two sets of panel controls to permit use of this station for troubleshooting.

- Chief Engineer's office. This control room includes smaller scale repetitive versions of numerous displays in Main Engineering, as well as workstations for the Chief Engineer and two assistants. It also includes emergency control stations, with primary nonlinear controls reserved for Main Engineering. This office is located immediately adjacent to the main reactor chamber assembly. A reinforced optical window permits the Chief Engineer to directly observe the reactor chamber systems within the core without the need for sensor displays.

- Duty engineer's console. Adjacent to the Chief

Engineer's office is a smaller workstation available for use of the Duty engineer. This console incorporates the systems display repetitive panels.

This facility is located immediately adjacent to the main reactor chamber. For safety reasons, two sets of isolation doors are available to protect the Main Engineering control center from the main containment reaction chamber in case of serious malfunction or planned breach. These isolation doors can be triggered automatically. This function is provided by a system of containment barriers, which can be activated in the event of a warp core breach or similar contingency (See: 5.1.1).

The graphic master systems display console in the adjacent Main Engineering is actually the same unit, reworked to be used by Admiral Cartwright and company in Star Trek: Command in the movie Star Trek VI. The display crew Star Trek production staffers have taken it upon themselves to call it "the pool table."

4.0 COMPUTER SYSTEMS

4.1 COMPUTER SYSTEM

The main computer system of the Enterprise is probably the most important single operational element of the starship itself to the crew. The computer is directly analogous to the autonomic nervous system of a living being, and is responsible in some way for the operation of virtually every other system of the vessel.

Close interface for the main computer is provided by the Library Computer Access and Retrieval System software, usually abbreviated as LCARS. LCARS provides both keyboard and verbal interface ability, incorporating highly sophisticated artificial intelligence routines and graphic display organization for maximum crew ease-of-use (See: 3.3).

COMPUTER CORES

The heart of the main computer system is a set of three redundant main processing cores. Any of these three cores is able to handle the primary operations computing load of the entire vessel. Two of these cores are located near the center of the Primary Hull between Decks 9 and 14, while the third is located between Decks 20 and 21 in the Engineering Hull. Each main core incorporates a series of miniature sub-core field generators, which creates a syncretical (nonphysical) field dimension of 3000 millichannels within the faster-than-light (FTL) core elements. This permits the transmission and processing of signal data within the core at rates significantly exceeding light-speed.

The two main cores in the Primary Hull act in parallel clock cycle with each other, providing 100% redundancy. In the event of any failure in either core, the other core is able to instantly assume the total primary computing load for the ship with no interruption, although some secondary and noncritical functions (such as holdback simulations) may be suspended. The third core, located in the Engineering Hull, serves as a backup to the first two, and also serves the Battle Section during expanded flight operations.

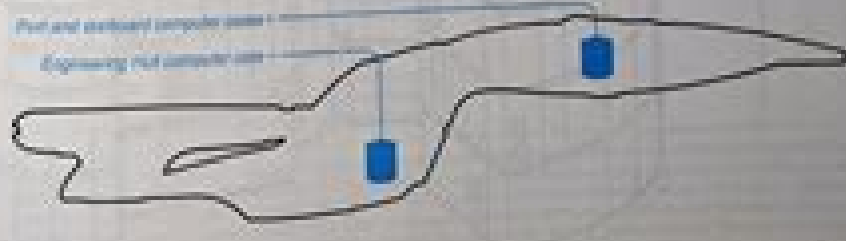

Core elements are based on FTL microprocessor units arranged into optical transverse channels of 1,024 segments. In turn, channels are grouped into processing modules composed of 256 modules controlled by a bank of control sub-core chips. Each core comprises seven primary and three upper-level banks, each bank containing an average of four modules.

CORE MEMORY

Memory storage for main core usage is provided by 2,048 dedicated modules of 144 full-hour optical storage (FHS) under LCARS software control. These modules provide quantum dynamic access to memory at 4,000 kilobytes/sec. Total storage capacity of each module is about 600,000 kilobytes, depending on software configuration.
