

These findings have important implications for the design of training programs for the construction industry. The results suggest that training programs should focus on developing the skills and knowledge of workers in the areas of safety, health, and environmental protection. This can be achieved through a combination of classroom-based instruction and hands-on training. Additionally, training programs should also focus on developing the workers' understanding of the importance of safety, health, and environmental protection in the construction industry. This can be achieved through the use of case studies and other educational materials that illustrate the consequences of unsafe practices. Finally, training programs should also focus on developing the workers' ability to identify and report safety hazards. This can be achieved through the use of role-playing exercises and other training activities that simulate real-world scenarios.

Strategic Corporate Social Responsibility David Chandler, 2022-09-12 Strategic Corporate Social Responsibility Sustainable Value Creation Sixth Edition redefines corporate social responsibility CSR as being central to the value creating purpose of the firm Based on a theory of empowered stakeholders this bestselling text argues that the responsibility of a corporation is to create value broadly defined The primary challenge for managers today is to balance the competing interests of the firm's stakeholders understanding that what they expect today may not be what they will expect tomorrow This tension is what makes CSR so complex and demanding but it is also what makes CSR integral to the firm's strategy and day to day operations In this new Sixth Edition author David Chandler explores issues around COVID 19 the BLM movement the supply chain crunch and the great resignation

The Participatory Cultures Handbook Aaron Delwiche, Jennifer Jacobs Henderson, 2012-09-10 How did we get from Hollywood to YouTube What makes Wikipedia so different from a traditional encyclopedia Has blogging dismantled journalism as we know it Our media landscape has undergone a seismic shift as digital technology has fostered the rise of participatory culture in which knowledge is originated created distributed and evaluated in radically new ways The Participatory Cultures Handbook is an indispensable interdisciplinary guide to this rapidly changing terrain. With short accessible essays from leading geographers, political scientists, communication theorists, game designers, activists, policy makers, physicists, and poets, this volume will introduce students to the concept of participatory culture, explain how researchers approach participatory culture studies, and provide original examples of participatory culture in action. Topics include crowdsourcing, crisis mapping, grid computing, digital activism in authoritarian countries, collaborative poetry, collective intelligence, participatory budgeting, and the relationship between video games and civic engagement. Contributors include Daren Brabham, Helen Burgess, Clay Calvert, Mia Consalvo, Kelly Czarnecki, David M. Faris, Dieter Fuchs, Owen Gallagher, Clive Goodinson, Alexander Halvaks, Cynthia Hawkins, John Heaven, The Jannissary Collective, Henry Jenkins, Barry Joseph, Christopher Kelty, Pierre L. vy, Sophia B. Public Space and the Ideology of Place in American Culture, 2009-01-01. We typically take public space for granted as if it has continuously been there, yet public space has always been the expression of the will of some agency, person, or institution who names the space, gives it purpose, and monitors its existence. And often its use has been contested. These new essays, written for this volume, approach public space through several key questions: Who has the right to define public space? How do such places generate and sustain symbolic meaning? Is public space unchanging, or is it subject to our subjective perception? Do we, given the public nature of public space, have the right to subvert it? These eighteen essays, including several case studies, offer convincing evidence of a spatial turn in American studies. They argue for a re-visioning of American culture as a history of place-making and the instantiation of meaning in structures, boundaries, and spatial configurations. Chronologically, the subjects range from Pierre L. Enfant's initial majestic conceptualization of Washington D.C. to the post-modern realization that public space in the U.S. is increasingly a matter of waste. Topics range from parks to cities to small towns, from open-air museums to airports, encompassing the commercial marketing of place as well as the subversion and re-possession of public space by the disenfranchised. Ultimately, public space is variously imagined as the site of social and political contestation and of aesthetic change.

Private Data and Public Value, Holly Jarman, Luis F. Luna-Reyes, 2016-02-26. This book investigates the ways in which these systems can promote public value by encouraging the disclosure and reuse of privately held data in ways that support collective values such as environmental sustainability. Supported by funding from the National Science Foundation, the authors' research team has been working on one such system designed to enhance consumers' ability to access information about the sustainability of the products that they buy and the supply chains that produce them. Pulled by rapidly developing technology and pushed by budget cuts, politicians and public managers are attempting to find ways to increase the public value of their actions. Policymakers are increasingly acknowledging the potential that lies in publicly disclosing more of the data that they hold, as well as incentivizing individuals and organizations to access, use, and combine it.

in new ways Due to technological advances which include smarter phones better ways to track objects and people as they travel and more efficient data processing it is now possible to build systems which use shared transparent data in creative ways The book adds to the current conversation among academics and practitioners about how to promote public value through data disclosure focusing particularly on the roles that governments businesses and non profit actors can play in this process making it of interest to both scholars and policy makers
