

Friction is a force that impedes motion by its resistive nature. This resistance will generally oppose the direction of motion causing problems that involve static friction and sliding friction. Most friction is the result. Friction may be either static and sliding friction. Friction is the result of the interaction between surfaces.

I. Calculating Friction

In the following figure, a force F is applied to an object. This force is applied to the object F_x which is:

Let's say the normal force F_N is applied to the object. The normal force is applied to the object.

Let's say the normal force is applied to the object.

Friction

$$\text{Friction force } F_f = \mu F_N$$

In this equation:

- (1) F_f is the force of friction.
- (2) μ is coefficient of friction.
- (3) F_N is normal force applied to the object.

Example: A car is sliding on a surface. The coefficient of friction is 0.1. The normal force is 1000 N. What is the friction force?

$$\begin{aligned} F_f &= \mu F_N \\ F_f &= 0.1(1000 \text{ N}) \\ F_f &= 100 \text{ N} \end{aligned}$$

In this example, F_f is the force of friction.

II. Static Friction

Static friction is the force that opposes the motion of an object. It is the force that opposes the motion of an object. It is the force that opposes the motion of an object.

- (1) It is the force that opposes the motion of an object. It is the force that opposes the motion of an object. It is the force that opposes the motion of an object.
