New Empirical Perspectives on Translation and Interpreting Lore Vandevoorde, Joke Daems, Bart Defrancq, 2019-12-06 Drawing on work from both eminent and emerging scholars in translation and interpreting studies this collection offers a critical reflection on current methodological practices in these fields toward strengthening the theoretical and empirical ties between them Methodological and technological advances have pushed these respective areas of study forward in the last few decades but advanced tools such as eye tracking and keystroke logging and insights from their use have often remained in isolation and not shared across disciplines This volume explores empirical and theoretical challenges across these areas and the subsequent methodologies implemented to address them and how they might be mutually applied across translation and interpreting studies but also brought together toward a coherent empirical theory of translation and interpreting studies Organized around three key themes target text orientedness source text orientedness and translator interpreter orientedness the book takes stock of both studies of translation and interpreting corpora and processes in an effort to answer such key questions including how do written translation and interpreting relate to each other How do technological advances in these fields shape process and product What would an empirical theory of translation and interpreting studies look like Taken together the collection showcases the possibilities of further dialogue around methodological practices in translation and interpreting studies and will be of interest to students and scholars in these fields

The Mana of Translation Bryan Kamaoli Kuwada, 2024-12-31 In The Mana of Translation Translational Flow in Hawaiian History from the Baibala to the Mauna Bryan Kamaoli Kuwada makes visible the often unseen workings of translation in Hawai'i from the advent of Hawaiian alphabetic literacy to contemporary struggles over language and land Translation has had a massive impact on Hawaiian history both as it unfolded and how it came to be understood yet it remains understudied in Hawaiian and Indigenous scholarship In an engaging and wide ranging analysis Kuwada examines illuminative instances of translation across the last two centuries through the analytic of mana unuhi the mana power authority branch version attained or given through translation Translation has long been seen as a tool of colonialism but examining history through mana unuhi demonstrates how Hawaiians used translation as a powerful tool to assert their own literary cultural and political sovereignty something Hawaiians think of in terms of ea life breath sovereignty rising Translation also gave mana to particular stories about Hawaiians some empowering others harmful creating a clash of narratives that continue to this day Drawing on sources in Hawaiian and English that span newspapers letters and journals religious and legal documents missionary records court transcripts traditional stories and more this book makes legible the utility and importance of paying attention to mana unuhi in Hawai'i and beyond Through chapters on translating the Hawaiian Bible the role of translation in the Hawaiian Kingdom's bilingual legal system Hawaiians powerful deployment of translation in nineteenth century newspapers the early twentieth century era of extractive scholarly translation and the possibilities that come from refusing translation as demonstrated in legal proceedings related to the protection of Maunakea Kuwada questions narratives about the inevitability of colonial victory and the idea that things can only be lost in translation Writing in an accessible yet rigorous style Kuwada follows the flows of translation and its material practices to bring forth the power dynamics of languages and how these differential forces play out on ideological and political battlefields Specifically rooted in Hawai'i yet broadly applicable to other colonial situations The Mana of Translation provides us with a transformative new way of looking at Hawaiian history

Translation as Mission William Allen Smalley, 1991 For Christians from New Testament times on the Bible has almost everywhere been a translated Bible For eighteen centuries it was normally translated into new languages by native speakers but with the beginning of the nineteenth century and the modern missionary movement came a burst of missionary translation around the world As missionary churches were established and as societies worldwide were affected by the gospel people studied the translations preached from them and recounted stories to their children In many societies these translations were the foundation for Christian communities for theology including indigenous theologies and a powerful stimulus to modernization and even secularization reaching beyond the Christian community Smalley contends that the theological presuppositions of these missionary translators varied widely He argues that some missionary translators were insightful scholars who probed deeply into the languages and cultures in which they were working others were unable to transcend the perspective their own culture prescribed for them Earlier missionaries did not always have a clearly formulated theory of translation or an understanding of what they were doing and why Eventually however a theoretical model was developed a model that the majority of translators both missionary and nonmissionary now use Smalley maintains that the task of Bible translation is now passing out of the hands of missionaries and back into the hands of native speakers casting the missionary translator into significantly changed roles in the translation process
