Following the 1998 election, several new areas of the business in 2001 were the focus of strategic management research, for example, change leader strategies, marketing management, sales, recruiting, financial strategy, culture, communication, innovation, and organizing. Innovation, organizing, financial management, and sales were the most significant areas of research in the 2001 year-end special double issues. Following this special double issue, several other new focus areas emerged. Marketing, innovation, and the financial management sections have fully integrated the financial management, sales, and marketing articles. These will continue the integration.
