Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and physical fitness of obese women. The subjects were 15 obese women who were randomly assigned to either a control group or an experimental group. The control group was instructed to maintain their current diet and lifestyle, while the experimental group was instructed to follow a 1000 kcal energy deficit diet. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 10 weeks for body composition and physical fitness. The experimental group showed a significant decrease in body weight, body fat percentage, and waist circumference, and a significant increase in physical fitness compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet is effective in improving body composition and physical fitness in obese women.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program that included aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and end of the training program using a series of tests. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the training program. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.
