White People Report To The Cotton Fields:

Report on the Internal Commerce of the United States United States. Department of the Treasury. Bureau of Statistics,1886 From Cotton Field to Schoolhouse Christopher M. Span,2012-04-01 In the years immediately following the Civil War the formative years for an emerging society of freed African Americans in Mississippi there was much debate over the general purpose of black schools and who would control them From Cotton Field to Schoolhouse is the first comprehensive examination of Mississippi s politics and policies of postwar racial education The primary debate centered on whether schools for African Americans mostly freedpeople should seek to develop blacks as citizens train them to be free but subordinate laborers or produce some other outcome African Americans envisioned schools established by and for themselves as a primary means of achieving independence equality political empowerment and some degree of social and economic mobility in essence full citizenship Most northerners assisting freedpeople regarded such expectations as unrealistic and expected African Americans to labor under contract for those who had previously enslaved them and their families Meanwhile many white Mississippians objected to any educational opportunities for the former slaves Christopher Span finds that newly freed slaves made heroic efforts to participate in their own education but too often the schooling was used to control and redirect the aspirations of the newly freed The American Journal of Sociology Albion W.

Congress House. Committee on Agriculture, 1968 Land of the Underground Rain Donald E. Green, 2014-07-03 The scarcity of surface water which has so marked the Great Plains is even more characteristic of its subdivision the Texas High Plains Settlers on the plateau were forced to use pump technology to tap the vast ground water resources the underground rain beneath its flat surface The evolution from windmills to the modern high speed irrigation pumps took place over several decades Three phases characterized the movement toward irrigation In the period from 1910 to 1920 large volume pumping plants first appeared in the region but due to national and regional circumstances these premature efforts were largely abortive The second phase began as a response to the drouth of the Dust Bowl and continued into the 1950s By 1959 irrigation had become an important aspect of the flourishing High Plains economy The decade of the 1960s was characterized chiefly by a growing alarm over the declining ground water table caused by massive pumping and by investigations of other water sources Land of the Underground Rain is a study in human use and threatened exhaustion of the High Plains most valuable natural resource Ground water was so plentiful that settlers believed it flowed inexhaustibly from some faraway place or mysteriously from a giant underground river Whatever the source they believed that it was being constantly replenished and until the 1950s they generally opposed effective conservation of ground water A growing number of weak and dry wells then made it apparent that Plains residents were mining an exhaustible resource The Texas High Plains region has been far more successful in exploiting its resource than in conserving it The very success of its pump technology has produced its environmental crisis The problem brought about by the threatened exhaustion of this resource still awaits a solution This study is the first comprehensive history of irrigation on the Texas High Plains and it is the first comprehensive treatment of the development of twentieth century pump irrigation in any area of the United States Report United States.
