These findings are consistent with the idea that the brain is not a single unit, but a collection of specialized modules, each with its own set of rules and functions. This modular view of the brain is supported by a wide range of evidence, from neuroimaging studies to behavioral experiments. It suggests that the brain is a complex system, with different parts working together to produce the behaviors we see. This understanding has important implications for how we think about the brain and the mind, and it has led to a more nuanced and sophisticated view of the brain's organization and function.
