• For the "Cables Required" chart that appears with the diagram to determine which cables you'll need, see step 3 to provide extra accessories, such as cables and adapters, depending on the components you plan to connect.

• Turn off and unplug all components before making connections. If you are connecting a digital cable box, you'll need a special for-directional splitter that's compatible with your cable box. Contact your cable provider.

Making Video Connections

Your TV includes several types of video inputs. Use the inputs that are available on your components that provide the best video performance as described in step 3.

Connector type	Notes
HDMI (High-Definition Multimedia Interface)	• Component video
DVI (Digital Visual Interface)	• Component video
S-Video	• Component video
Composite	• Component video
RF (Radio Frequency)	• Component video

Additional Connections

The best video performance comes from your digital video components using either digital optical or digital serial video connections. Depending on which components are in your system, you may need to complete additional connections. For example, if you have a satellite receiver, you'll need to connect the satellite receiver. If you have an A/V receiver, you'll need to connect speakers.

Note

The receiver's program logic will prevent the use of component video when digital video is used. Connect the video as TV input as often as you can. In some cases, an A/V receiver is required to use digital video connections.

Activating CableCARD™ Service

Before you use the Digital Audio™ service, you need to turn the CableCARD™ supplied by your cable provider on and activate the service, as described in step 3.

Note

Turning the CableCARD™ service on may require a service technician visit and will be at the user's expense.
