Baker, 2015-05-05 While 97 percent of all American cities are smaller than 50 000 and millions of Americans experience civic life in these communities what we know about their politics and governance is limited particularly how local board systems operate who the board members are what motivates them to serve and what they think about their experiences Drawing on a unique and extensive set of survey data from board members mayors and city councilors in sixty cities across six states Government in the Twilight Zone significantly expands our knowledge of small city boards and politics By embedding the empirical research in the historical trajectory of small towns John R Baker provides a rich narrative that discusses the role of entities such as planning commissions parks and recreation boards and zoning appeals boards He also clarifies how board and commission members are recruited in small cities explains how these organizations work to make the decisions required of them and reveals what they and their city councilors and mayors think about their importance and effectiveness Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations for Fiscal Year 2000 United States. Congress. House. Committee on Appropriations. Subcommittee on the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations, 1999 Playing against Nature Seth Stein, Jerome Stein, 2014-04-09 Defending society against natural hazards is a high stakes game of chance against nature involving tough decisions How should a developing nation allocate its budget between building schools for towns without ones or making existing schools earthquake resistant Does it make more sense to build levees to protect against floods or to prevent development in the areas at risk Would more lives be saved by making hospitals earthquake resistant or using the funds for patient care What should scientists tell the public when as occurred in L Aquila Italy and Mammoth Lakes California there is a real but small risk of an upcoming earthquake or volcanic eruption Recent hurricanes earthquakes and tsunamis show that society often handles such choices poorly Sometimes nature surprises us when an earthquake hurricane or flood is bigger or has greater effects than expected from detailed hazard assessments In other cases nature outsmarts us doing great damage despite expensive mitigation measures or causing us to divert limited resources to mitigate hazards that are overestimated Much of the problem comes from the fact that formulating effective natural hazard policy involves combining science economics and risk analysis to analyze a problem and explore the costs and benefits of different options in situations where the future is very uncertain Because mitigation policies are typically chosen without such analysis the results are often disappointing This book uses general principles and case studies to explore how we can do better by taking an integrated view of natural hazards issues rather than treating the relevant geoscience engineering economics and policy formulation separately Thought provoking questions at the end of each chapter invite readers to confront the complex issues involved Readership Instructors researchers practitioners and students interested in geoscience engineering economics or policy issues relevant to natural hazards Suitable for upper level undergraduate or graduate courses Additional resources can be found at <http://www.wiley.com/go/Stein> Playing against nature Population Crisis United States.
