Chapter 15, Section 1

I. The Missouri Compromise (Pages 436–437)

A. When Missouri applied for statehood in 1919, it was a territory whose citizens owned about 10,000 enslaved African Americans. At the time the Senate was balanced, with 11 free states and 11 slave states, Missouri's admission to the Union as a slave state would have upset that balance of power.

B. The North and the South, with very different economic systems, were also competing for new lands in the West. People in the North wanted to stop the spread of slavery into new states and territories. People in the South resented the North's attempts to interfere with slavery, which they considered their own affair.

C. Representative Henry Clay, Speaker of the House, proposed a solution to the Missouri problem. Maine, which had been a part of Massachusetts, had also applied for admission to the Union as a new state. Clay suggested admitting Missouri as a slave state and admitting Maine as a free state at the same time.

D. Clay also made a second proposal to settle several arguments about slavery in the territories. He proposed prohibiting slavery in all territories and states carved from the Louisiana Purchase north of the latitude line of 36°30'N. The one exception would be Missouri.

E. Clay's two proposals, which became known as the Missouri Compromise, were passed by Congress in 1820. The Missouri Compromise preserved the balance between free and slave states, and ended the debate in Congress over slavery in new states and territories—at least for a while.

II. New Western Lands (Pages 437–438)

A. The issue of slavery in new Western lands stayed in the background between 1820 (the year of the Missouri Compromise) and the 1840s. The proposal to add a new set of states and territories (Texas, New Mexico, and California) brought the issue to a head again.

B. After winning independence from Mexico, Texas asked for admission to the Union. Because slavery existed in Texas, it would have entered the Union as a slave state. This again brought out the question of whether free or slave states would control the Senate. As a result Texas's statehood became an issue in the 1844 election.

C. Democratic candidate James K. Polk won the election and pressed to add Texas. Texas became a state in 1845. At the same time, support in the South for taking over New Mexico and California, which were both part of Mexico, also grew.

D. Disputes between the United States and Mexico over boundaries in Texas and the desire of the United States for New Mexico and California led to the Mexican-American War.

E. A bitter debate over slavery in new Western lands began over proposals by Representative David Wilmot of Pennsylvania and Senator John C. Calhoun of South Carolina. Wilmot's proposal, called the Wilmot Proviso, said that slavery should be prohibited in any lands that might be acquired from Mexico at the end of the Mexican-American War. Calhoun's counterproposal stated that neither Congress nor any other governmental authority had the power to prohibit or regulate slavery in any way in a territory. Neither proposal passed Congress, but these proposals intensified arguments for and against slavery.

F. The debate over slavery and the refusal of either the Democratic or Whig candidate
