ON THE DAY THE SKY BLAZED,
THE LEGEND BEGINS

The background of the poster is a dark, fiery red. It depicts a scene with several characters. In the center, a man with a beard and glasses, wearing a dark blue clerical robe, stands with his hands clasped. Behind him, a woman with short dark hair and a red and black outfit floats in the air. To the left, a young man in a grey and blue outfit is shown in a dynamic pose. To the right, another young man in a green jacket is also in a dynamic pose. The background is filled with dark, twisted tree branches and glowing red circular patterns.

Women, Writing, and Language in Early Modern Ireland Marie-Louise Coolahan, 2010-01-28. This book examines writing in English, Irish, and Spanish by women living in Ireland and by Irish women living on the continent between the years 1574 and 1676. This was a tumultuous period of political, religious, and linguistic contestation that encompassed the key power struggles of early modern Ireland. This study brings to light the ways in which women contributed; they strove to be heard and to make sense of their situations, forging space for their voices in complex ways and engaging with native and new language traditions. The book investigates the genres in which women wrote: poetry, nuns' writing, petition letters, depositions, biography, and autobiography. It argues for a complex understanding of authorial agency that centres on the act of creating or composing a text, which does not necessarily equate with the physical act of writing. The Irish, English, and European contexts for women's production of texts are identified and assessed. The literary traditions and languages of the different communities living on the island are juxtaposed in order to show how identities were shaped and defined in relation to each other. Marie-Louise Coolahan elucidates the social, political, and economic imperatives for women's writing; examines the ways in which women characterized female composition; and describes an extensive range of cross-cultural, multilingual activity.

Work, Class, and Power in the Borderlands of the Early American Pacific Evan Lampe, 2013-12-12. This book traces the history of working people who helped establish the foundation of the American empire in the Pacific from its origins after the American Revolution to its coming of age in the 1840s and 1850s. Beginning with the expeditions of the Columbia and the Lady Washington, Lampe argues that the early American Pacific can best be considered through the interaction of four major locations connected through the networks of trade: the merchant ship, the Northwest Coast, Honolulu, and Canton, Guangzhou. In each of these locations, the labors of a diverse population of working people were harnessed in the critical labors of empire building, including the transportation of goods. The central question is the consideration of working people in the Pacific economy during this period. Lampe argues the role of power applied on these laborers by an international capitalist class emerging alongside the Pacific commercial empires. Lampe also finds that this power was not uncontested and emerged in response to the activities of labor. Working people on the ship and in the port cities found ways to secure their piece of the profitable trade, often through illicit means.

Medieval Historical Writing Jennifer Jahner, Emily Steiner, Elizabeth M. Tyler, 2019-11-28. History writing in the Middle Ages did not belong to any particular genre, language, or class of texts. Its remit was wide, embracing the events of antiquity the deeds of saints rulers and abbots archival practices and contemporary reportage This volume addresses the challenges presented by medieval historiography by using the diverse methodologies of medieval studies legal and literary history art history religious studies codicology the history of the emotions gender studies and critical race theory Spanning one thousand years of historiography in England Wales Ireland and Scotland the essays map historical thinking across literary genres and expose the rich veins of national mythmaking tapped into by medieval writers Additionally they attend to the ways in which medieval histories crossed linguistic and geographical borders Together they trace multiple temporalities and productive anachronisms that fuelled some of the most innovative medieval writing Athenaeum and London

Literary Chronicle ,1871 The Greatest Traitor Ian Mortimer,2013-08-20 A compelling page turner about the medieval English baron who invaded his own country and deposed a king Alison Weir New York Times bestselling author of Queen Isabella One night in August 1323 a captive rebel baron Sir Roger Mortimer drugged his guards and escaped from the Tower of London With the king s men at arms in pursuit he fled to the south coast and sailed to France There he was joined by Isabella the French born queen of England who threw herself into his arms A year later as lovers they returned with an invading army King Edward II s forces crumbled before them and Mortimer took power He removed Edward II in the first deposition of a monarch in British history Then the ex king was apparently murdered some said with a red hot poker in Berkeley Castle Brutal intelligent passionate profligate imaginative and violent Sir Roger Mortimer was an extraordinary character It is not surprising that the queen lost her heart to him Nor is it surprising that his contemporaries were terrified of him But until now no one has appreciated the full evil genius of the man This first biography reveals not only Mortimer s career as a feudal lord a governor of Ireland a rebel leader and a dictator of England but also the truth of what happened that night in Berkeley Castle A fast paced and entertaining narrative Publishers Weekly Some terrific detective work The New York Times Book Review The most remarkable medieval historian of our time The Times The British Quarterly Review ,1880
