QUESTION A 60-year-old male with a long history of alcohol abuse presents with a 2-week history of increasing weakness and weight loss. He reports a recent episode of vomiting blood. Physical examination reveals a pale, thin man with a tachycardic rate of 110 beats per minute. Laboratory studies show a hemoglobin of 8 g/dL, hematocrit of 24%, and a mean corpuscular volume of 75 fL. A computed tomography scan of the abdomen shows a large, heterogeneous mass in the right upper quadrant. What is the most likely diagnosis?

ANSWER B. Hepatocellular carcinoma

EXPLANATION The patient's history of alcohol abuse, weight loss, and vomiting blood are suggestive of a malignant process. The physical examination findings of a pale, thin man with a tachycardic rate are consistent with anemia. The laboratory studies show a microcytic anemia, which is most commonly caused by iron deficiency anemia. However, the patient's history of alcohol abuse and the CT scan findings of a large, heterogeneous mass in the right upper quadrant are more suggestive of a malignant process. The most likely diagnosis is hepatocellular carcinoma, which is a primary liver cancer that can cause anemia and vomiting blood. The CT scan findings of a large, heterogeneous mass in the right upper quadrant are also consistent with hepatocellular carcinoma.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The physical health of the women was assessed using a variety of measures, including heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The psychological health of the women was assessed using a variety of measures, including mood, self-esteem, and anxiety. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the women. The women in the walking program had lower heart rates, lower blood pressures, and lower body mass indices than the women in the control group. The women in the walking program also had improved mood, self-esteem, and anxiety compared to the women in the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical activity program, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rates and blood pressures at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. The body mass index of the children in the experimental group also increased significantly. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

1. Introduction

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 100 male students. The program included aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The results showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the students' physical fitness, as measured by heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The program also had a significant positive effect on the students' psychological well-being, as measured by self-esteem and anxiety levels. The program was well-received by the students and was considered to be a valuable addition to their physical education curriculum.
