

EAT OR THEN
FROM SAND

Readers: How do you hit it solid out of fairway bunkers?

Tiger: I was surprised by all the hoopla over the fairway bunker shot I hit at the 72nd hole of the Centurian Open last year. I guess because of the distance (218 yards) and the water hazard, it seemed like a miracle shot. Believe me, it was more dramatic than difficult. Even so, I probably wouldn't have risked it had Grant [Waite] not forced my hand by reaching the green himself.

First of all, it's correct to assume that solid contact is crucial when playing a fairway bunker shot. You must contact the ball before the sand. To ensure that, play the ball more toward the middle of your stance and try to stay "tall" through impact. You can accomplish that by raising your chin slightly just before starting your backswing. I also take one more club than normal for the distance and choke down on it in direct proportion to how much I dig my feet into the sand—usually about a half-inch. Finally, I decrease my swing speed by about 30 percent. This not only increases accuracy but also allows me to keep my balance.
