Essential biographical and character narratives are combined with an analysis of the social and political movements of the era and their historical significance. Seniors examines the link between Mallory Johnson and Proctor Seniors's radical activism and their connections to national and international leftist human rights movements and organizations. She asks the underlying question: Why did these women choose radical activism and align themselves with revolutionary governments linking Black human rights to world revolutions. Seniors's historical and personal account of the era aims to recover Black women radical activists' place in history. Her innovative research and compelling storytelling broaden our knowledge of these activists and their political movements.

It chronicles the life story of a couple who understood the importance of service to country, to community, and to family. After a ten-year childless wait, the pair adopted Keith, Linda, Marianne, Shannon, and Kirk, ages 12 through 6, from Toronto, Canada. Five years later, the couple was blessed by the birth of Jill, and then Jane. Because of the age difference, in some ways it was like having two families, but it developed into one big happy group. The story is highlighted by the rare inclusion of both husband and wife voices. The collaborative narrative with Mary Lou provides perspective and depth. An unforgettable life story that reads like a warm conversation with an old friend, it is honest, funny, and moving. From a family legacy viewpoint, this memoir is a treasure.
