The Upshaws Of County Line An American Family:

The Upshaws of County Line Richard Orton, 2014-11-15 Guss Felix and Jim Upshaw founded the community of County Line in the 1870s in northwest Nacogdoches County in deep East Texas. As with hundreds of other relatively autonomous black communities created at that time, the Upshaws sought a safe place to raise their children and create a livelihood during Reconstruction and Jim Crow Texas. In the late 1980s, photographer Richard Orton visited County Line for the first time and became aware of a world he did not know existed as a white man. He went down the rabbit hole so to speak and met some remarkable people there who changed his life. The more than 50 duotone photographs and text convey the contemporary experience of growing up in a freedom colony. Covering a period of twenty-five years, photographer Richard Orton juxtaposes his images with text from people who grew up in and have remained connected to their birthplace. Thad Sitton's foreword sets the community in historical context, and Roy Flukinger points out the beauty of the documentary photographs. This book should appeal to anyone interested in American or Texas history, particularly the history of African Americans in the South in the aftermath of the Civil War. The book should also be of interest to anyone with an appreciation for documentary photography, including students and teachers of photography.

A Biscuit for Your Shoe Beatrice Upshaw, Richard Orton, 2020-11-13 In TFS Extra Book 28, Beatrice Upshaw shares her memories of growing up in County Line. A Biscuit for Your Shoe captures the lore of a community which began as a freedom colony west of Nacogdoches in East Texas. The book is a memoir, but it shares more than merely family memories of significant events. It tells of beliefs, home remedies, folk games, and customs, as well as the importance of religion and education to a community of like-minded people. The narrative is a rich source of colloquial language and proverbial sayings that help define a group of people and their strong sense of place. Richard Orton was first introduced to County Line by F. E. Abernethy, the Secretary Editor of the TFS, for nearly four decades. Richard eventually did a photographic book on the people of the community, The Upshaws of County Line: An American Family, but he believed that Beatrice's memoir should be developed into a separate work that could be shared with an audience larger than just family and friends. Richard's introduction explains the value of the stories. Beatrice Upshaw presents in A Biscuit for Your Shoe that they are personal, but the overall narrative speaks collectively about the perseverance and innovation of many people who found a way to not only survive but to thrive in East Texas.

Freedom Colonies Thad Sitton, James H. Conrad, 2010-01-01 A history of independent African American settlements in Texas during the Jim Crow era, featuring historical and contemporary photographs. In the decades following the Civil War, nearly a quarter of African Americans achieved a remarkable victory: they got their own land. While other ex-slaves and many poor whites became trapped in the exploitative sharecropping system, these independence-seeking individuals settled on pockets of unclaimed land that had been deemed too poor for farming and turned them into successful family farms. In these self-sufficient rural communities, often known as freedom colonies, African Americans created a refuge from the discrimination and violence that routinely limited the opportunities of blacks in the Jim Crow South Freedom Colonies is the first book to tell the story of these independent African American settlements Thad Sitton and James Conrad focus on communities in Texas where blacks achieved a higher percentage of land ownership than in any other state of the Deep South The authors draw on a vast reservoir of ex slave narratives oral histories written memoirs and public records to describe how the freedom colonies formed and to recreate the lifeways of African Americans who made their living by farming or in skilled trades such as milling and blacksmithing They also uncover the forces that led to the decline of the communities from the 1930s onward including economic hard times and the greed of whites who found legal and illegal means of taking black owned land And they visit some of the remaining communities to discover how their independent way of life endures into the twenty first century Thad Sitton and James H Conrad have made an important contribution to African American and southern history with their study of communities fashioned by freedmen in the years after emancipation Journal of American History This study is a thoughtful and important addition to an understanding of rural Texas and the nature of black settlements Journal of Southern History
