revolutions transformed political agency and human subjectivities and radically reparative more than human climate politics. At the heart of the book is an original and interdisciplinary approach. It studies official climate policy strategies and fictional texts side by side as ecopolitical imaginaries that envision low carbon climate changed futures and narrate pathways from here to there. It discusses net zero strategies from Ethiopia, The Gambia, Nigeria, South Africa, and Zimbabwe and draws on postcolonial feminist and queer theory, arguing that Africanfuturist climate fiction can inspire more radical reparative more than human ecopolitical imaginaries. These stories can help us to understand the debts we all owe, imagine what reparations might entail, and explore the contours of living convivially alongside more than human others in heterotopian climate changed futures. Stories can help explore how we might feel in climate changed futures and can help us to narrate a path through them. This book uses Africanfuturist climate fiction to inspire new ways of challenging and enriching theoretical debates in global climate change politics, including how we understand the places, temporalities, ecologies, and politics of climate futures. If we want to survive, to tell new stories in liveable futures, then we need to urgently and radically transform carboniferous capitalism.

Oxford Studies in African Politics and International Relations is a series for scholars and students working on African politics and International Relations and related disciplines. Volumes concentrate on contemporary developments in African political science, political economy, and International Relations, such as electoral politics, democratization, decentralization, gender, and political representation; the political impact of natural resources; the dynamics and consequences of conflict; comparative political thought; and the nature of the continent's engagement with the East and West. Comparative and mixed methods work is particularly encouraged. Case studies are welcomed but should demonstrate the broader theoretical and empirical implications of the study and its wider relevance to contemporary debates. The focus of the series is on sub-Saharan Africa, although proposals that explain how the region engages with North Africa and other parts of the world are of interest.

Series Editors: Nic Cheeseman (University of Birmingham), Peace Medie (University of Bristol), and Ricardo Soares de Oliveira (University of Oxford).

Conscripts of Migration Christopher Ian Foster, 2019-08-23

In Conscripts of Migration, Christopher Ian Foster analyzes increasingly urgent questions regarding crises of global immigration by redefining migration in terms of conscription and by studying contemporary literature. Reporting on immigration, whether liberal or conservative, popular or scholarly, leaves out the history in which the Global North helped create outward migration in the Global South. From histories of racial capitalism, the trans-Atlantic slave trade, and imperialism to contemporary neoliberal globalization and the resurgence of xenophobic nationalism, countries in the Global North continue to devastate and destabilize the Global South. Britain, France, Italy, and the United States, in different ways, police the effects of their own global policies at their borders. Foster provides a substantial study of a new body of contemporary African diasporic literature called migrITUDE literature. MigrITUDE indicates the work and ideas of a disparate yet distinct group of younger African authors born after independence in the 1960s. Most often, migrITUDE authors have lived both in and outside Africa and narrate the experiences of migration under the pressures of globalization. They also emphasize that immigration itself and stereotypes of the immigrant are entangled with the history of colonialism. Authors like Fatou Diome, Shailja Patel, Abdourahman Waberi, Cristina Ali Farah and others confront critical issues of migrancy, diaspora, departure, return, racism, identity, gender, sexuality and postcoloniality.

Losing the Plot Leon de Kock, 2016-09-01. In Losing the Plot, well-known scholar and writer Leon de Kock offers a lively and wide-ranging analysis of postapartheid South African writing which he contends has morphed into a far more flexible and multifaceted entity than its predecessor. If postapartheid literature's founding moment was the transition to democracy, writing over the ensuing years has viewed the Mandela project with increasing doubt. Instead, authors from all quarters are seen to be reporting in different ways and from divergent points of view on what is perceived to be a pathological public sphere in which the plot, the mapping and making of social betterment appears to have been lost. The compulsion to detect forensically the actual causes of such loss of direction has resulted in the prominence of creative nonfiction. A significant adjunct in the rise of this is the new media which sets up a wounded space within which a cult of commiseration compulsively and repeatedly plays out the facts of the day on people's screens. This, De Kock argues, is reproduced in much postapartheid writing. And although fictional forms persist in genres such as crime fiction with their tendency to overplot more serious fiction, underplots yielding to the imprint of real conditions to determine the narrative construction.

Reading the Fantastic Imagination Dana Percec, 2014-06-26. The purpose of Reading the Fantastic Imagination: The Avatars of a Literary Genre is the observation of the very hybridity of the fantastic genre as a typical postmodern form. The volume continues an older project of the editor and a large number of the contributors that of investigating the current status of several popular genres from historical fiction to romance. The scrutiny continues in this third volume dedicated to the fantastic imagination and the plethora of themes, moods, media and formats deriving from it. FanLit is surely trendy even if it is not highbrow despite its noble ancestry. This apparent paradox characterizes many of the literary genres en vogue today from historical fiction to romance. This very contradiction forms part of the basis for this book. After the success of the previous book in the series dedicated to a borderline literary genre, Romance: The History of a Genre, was declared by Cambridge Scholars Publishing as the Critics' Choice Book of the Month in January 2013, this collection of studies about the fantastic imagination takes a further step into completing a larger research project which seeks to investigate the varieties of popular fiction. Although all contributors in the series teach canonical literary texts, they did not hesitate to plunge into the opposite area of fictional work and moreover continued doing so even though such a project caused the raise of a few high brows. Percec 2012: 232 as argued in the Endnote of Romance: The History of a Genre.

The Routledge Handbook of Literature and Space Robert Tally Jr., 2017-01-06. The spatial turn in literary studies is transforming the way we think of the field. The Routledge Handbook of Literature and Space maps the key areas of spatiality within literary studies, offering a comprehensive overview but also pointing towards new and exciting directions of study The interdisciplinary and global approach provides a thorough introduction and includes thirty two essays on topics such as Spatial theory and practice Critical methodologies Work sites Cities and the geography of urban experience Maps territories readings The contributors to this volume demonstrate how a variety of romantic realist modernist and postmodernist narratives represent the changing social spaces of their world and of our own world system today Natura Urbana Matthew Gandy, 2022-03-08 A study of urban nature that draws together different strands of urban ecology as well as insights derived from feminist posthuman and postcolonial thought Postindustrial transitions and changing cultures of nature have produced an unprecedented degree of fascination with urban biodiversity The other nature that flourishes in marginal urban spaces at one remove from the controlled contours of metropolitan nature is not the poor relation of rural flora and fauna Indeed these islands of biodiversity underline the porosity of the distinction between urban and rural In Natura Urbana Matthew Gandy explores urban nature as a multilayered material and symbolic entity through the lens of urban ecology and the parallel study of diverse cultures of nature at a global scale Gandy examines the articulation of alternative and in some cases counterhegemonic sources of knowledge about urban nature produced by artists writers scientists as well as curious citizens including voices seldom heard in environmental discourse The book is driven by Gandy's fascination with spontaneous forms of urban nature ranging from postindustrial wastelands brimming with life to the return of such predators as wolves and leopards on the urban fringe Gandy develops a critical synthesis between different strands of urban ecology and considers whether urban political ecology broadly defined might be imaginatively extended to take fuller account of both the historiography of the ecological sciences and recent insights derived from feminist posthuman and postcolonial thought
