Place, Not Race Sheryll Cashin, 2014-05-06 From a nationally recognized expert a fresh and original argument for bettering affirmative action Race based affirmative action had been declining as a factor in university admissions even before the recent spate of related cases arrived at the Supreme Court Since Ward Connerly kickstarted a state by state political mobilization against affirmative action in the mid 1990s the percentage of four year public colleges that consider racial or ethnic status in admissions has fallen from 60 percent to 35 percent Only 45 percent of private colleges still explicitly consider race with elite schools more likely to do so although they too have retreated For law professor and civil rights activist Sheryll Cashin this isn't entirely bad news because as she argues affirmative action as currently practiced does little to help disadvantaged people The truly disadvantaged black and brown children trapped in high poverty environs are not getting the quality schooling they need in part because backlash and wedge politics undermine any possibility for common sense public policies Using place instead of race in diversity programming she writes will better amend the structural disadvantages endured by many children of color while enhancing the possibility that we might one day move past the racial resentment that affirmative action engenders In Place Not Race Cashin reimagines affirmative action and champions place based policies arguing that college applicants who have thrived despite exposure to neighborhood or school poverty are deserving of special consideration Those blessed to have come of age in poverty free havens are not Sixty years since the historic decision we're undoubtedly far from meeting the promise of Brown v Board of Education but Cashin offers a new framework for true inclusion for the millions of children who live separate and unequal lives Her proposals include making standardized tests optional replacing merit based financial aid with need based financial aid and recruiting high achieving students from overlooked places among other steps that encourage cross racial alliances and social mobility A call for action toward the long overdue promise of equality Place Not Race persuasively shows how the social costs of racial preferences actually outweigh any of the marginal benefits when effective race neutral alternatives are available

Elite MBA Programs at Public Universities Mimi Wolverton, Larry Penley, 2004-11-30 Business education programs should practice what they preach applying the principles of strategic analysis to play to their strengths and develop distinctive offerings that attract the most profitable customers in this case students faculty local communities and the institutions that support them financially With the costs of private MBA programs skyrocketing public universities which generally operate out of the spotlight of the Harvards and Whartons have a tremendous opportunity to distinguish themselves as centers of innovative high quality education Mimi Wolverton and Larry Penley conducted extensive research to identify the qualities of those public institutions across the country from the University of Washington to Georgia Tech that have successfully established competitive advantages generally through a combination of cost leadership differentiation and focus Elite MBA Programs at Public Universities features 12 in depth case studies by senior representatives of the respective institutions detailing the process by which they developed and launched programs to raise their profiles and ultimately compete aggressively for talent and support From developing strategic alliances with local businesses and complementary academic departments to establishing online and overseas courses to investing in state of the art facilities these schools are setting new standards for business education and measuring the positive results for example in terms of increased funding higher faculty research productivity higher rankings and greater student diversity Wolverton and Penley frame the case studies by applying the concepts of strategy theory drawing lessons that can be applied in other educational institutions as well as for students of strategy and general readers interested in emerging trends in business education The result is a fascinating peek behind the scenes at the most innovative MBA programs as well as a rich canvas for observing the principles of strategic management in action

Knowledge and Money Roger L. Geiger, 2004-05-04 Market forces have profoundly affected the contemporary research university s fundamental tasks of creating and disseminating knowledge They arguably have provided American universities access to greater wealth better students and stronger links with the economy Yet they also have exaggerated inequalities diminished the university s control over its own activities and weakened the university s mission of serving the public Incorporating twenty years of research and new data covering 99 research universities Knowledge and Money explains this paradox by assessing how market forces have affected universities in four key spheres of activity finance undergraduate education primary research and participation in regional and national economic development The book begins by chronicling how universities have enlarged revenues by optimizing tuitions and how they have managed these funds It reveals why competition for the best students through selective undergraduate admissions has led to increased student consumerism and weakened university control over learning The book also explains why research has become an increasingly autonomous activity within the university expanding faster than class instruction or faculty resources Finally it shows how the linkage of research to economic development has engendered closer ties with industry and encouraged the commercialization of knowledge

The University under Pressure Elizabeth Popp Berman, Catherine Paradeise, 2016-02-26 Universities are under pressure Their resource environment is evolving demands for accountability have increased and demographic shifts are changing higher educational needs This volume provides a cross national picture of how the university as an organization is reacting to adapting to and threatened by a period of intense pressure
