

Grade 8 Speech Unit

Narrative Speeches:

Just like a personal narrative, a narrative speech tells a story about an influential event in your life. A narrative should revolve around a central theme or conviction.

For example, although it is all well and good that your nine-year-old tournament team won the championship in baseball that year, that is not enough reason to choose that topic for a narrative speech.

Since the topic of a narrative speech should revolve around a central theme or conviction, this experience should have changed your life in some way.

Now, if winning the tournament championship in baseball when you were nine years old solidified your love of baseball and made this game become your life's passion, well then it was a life changing event. In narrating this event for your audience, it should become clear to the audience what this event did to change further events in your life.

Remember the important elements in writing a personal narrative?

- 1. To entertain and inform the audience
- 2. To explain about a personal experience and make it come alive through the use of descriptive details and imagery.
- 3. Using chronological order to organize the details.
