How is Love Connected to Vengeance in Emily Bronte's Wuthering Heights Wuthering Heights' is one of the most well-liked and highly regarded novels in British literature. Although the book shocked the Victorian society with the portrayal of the passionate, obsessive love of Heathcliff and Catherine, 'Wuthering Heights' remains one of the most popular novels of the 20th century.

Heathcliff and Catherine's fervent and passionate love for one another is the key theme of the novel considering that it is the strongest and more permanent emotion portrayed in 'Wuthering Heights' as well as the source of the major conflicts that constitute the novel's plot. It's not clear if Bronte's intension is to encourage the condemnation of the two lovers as blameworthy or their idealization as romantic heroes whose love surpasses social norms and conventional morality. However, it is certain that the boundaries between love and revenge in the novel are quite blurred. Heathcliff, an orphan brought to live at Wuthering Heights, falls in love with Catherine, Mr. Earnshaw's daughter. Upon the death of Mr. Earnshaw, his son Hindley mistreats Heathcliff heavily treating him like a servant. At the same time, Catherine, driven by her aspiration for social prominence, marries Edgar Linton, leaving Heathcliff miserable and humiliated.

Full of feelings of disgrace and rejection, Heathcliff vows to spend the rest of his life seeking for revenge on all the people who betrayed them, namely Hindley, Catherine and Catherine's children. As the novel progresses, Heathcliff transforms from an orphan, romantic lover to a powerful, rich and even cruel man, who uses all of his power to acquire both Wuthering Heights and Edgar Linton's estate, Thrushcross Grange. Heathcliff and Catherine's love is well-established in their childhood and is characterized by the refusal to change. Her choice to marry Edgar Linton reveals Catherine's wish for a more refined life. However, she never adapts to her role as a wife. In a way, she remains stuck to her childhood. As she confines to Nelly, the narrator of the story, who grew up next to Hindley and Catherine Earnshaw and is profoundly involved in the story she recounts, Catherine longs to return to the security of her childhood. On the other hand, Heathcliff is portrayed as possessing an almost herculean ability to sustain the same approach and to foster the same grudges over many years.

His obsession is capable of transforming him into a cruel character that can take revenge on Catherine, the woman he loves since childhood and proclaims as his soul. Heathcliff is actually a Gothic hero, who seeks for vengeance and his desire is so strong that can overpower the norms of civilized society. He even imprisons Catherine's daughter, young Catherine and she forces her into marriage with his son, Linton. Moreover, Heathcliff and Catherine's love is based on their common perception that they are indistinguishable. Catherine notoriously asserts 'I am Heathcliff', while Heathcliff, upon her death, moans that he cannot live without his soul. All this asexual, passionate love, denies change, and secret rendezvous and as such it cannot fit in the relentless passage of time....

Victorian Suicide Barbara Gates,2014-07-14 When Viscount Castlereagh leader of the House of Commons and architect of the Grand Alliance committed suicide in 1822 the coroner's inquest could consider only two legal verdicts insanity or self murder Public outrage greeted his burial in Westminster Abbey the tradition lingered that a suicide's burial place be at a crossroads with a stake through the heart to keep the lost soul from wandering Probing a remarkable variety of sources and individual cases Barbara Gates shows how attitudes toward suicide changed between Castlereagh's death and the end of the century By 1900 the Victorians' moral censure of suicide and the accompanying denial that it was a widespread problem had been replaced by a more compassionate response and also by an unfounded belief in a suicide epidemic which Thomas Hardy described as a coming universal wish not to live Exposing a rich area of interaction between history and literature and utilizing the methodology of the new historicism Gates discusses topics ranging from the plot for Wuthering Heights to Victorian shilling shockers Among other findings she includes evidence that Victorian middle class men
