Should children (under 13) be allowed on social networking sites?

In today's society social networking sites such as Facebook and Twitter play a huge part in our lives. These websites are fantastic for communicating with friends and family that we don't often see. They are a great way of connecting with new people who have the same interests as you. They are also a great way to make new friends or find old ones. These websites, however, are not for children and with technology becoming increasingly easier to access, children are getting sucked into these sites younger and younger.

Studies show that children who are on social media sites show signs of behavioural problems. Children who are on Facebook happen to be more narcissistic, antisocial and aggressive than those not on the site. These websites are also known to affect their social skills as most kids would rather text or Instant Message than have a face-to-face conversation. Baroness Susan Greenfields, an Oxford neuroscientist said, "Kids are detracted from learning to communicate in the real world. There are reports from teachers that social networking is affecting kids' comprehension levels. Also, if kids communicate primarily through the screen, they do not learn the subtleties of real life communication – such as body language, tone of voice..." There are many reasons as to why social media websites have age restrictions and if this is how it mentally affects children then I personally feel they should be enforced.

Another reason, arguably the most important, is the dangers children face whilst being on the internet. Privacy is a main concern to anyone online and children often don't understand the risks involved with giving out too much personal information. A recent incident proves exactly this. Police in Renfrewshire are investigating reports after a man contacted a school and claimed to be a young girl's parent in an apparent abduction bid. The police are looking into whether the girl was targeted after she posted details on a social network site. Older children and adults know not to put personal details on their profiles, such as what school you go to and where you live, but young children are often targeted because of their innocence. Children are not as capable of seeing and understanding the consequences of their actions. Their naivety is one of the main reasons they are targeted as they will often accept any old friend request, whether or not they know them, on the basis that they have a funny profile picture. Personally I believe this is the main reason as to why young children shouldn't be given access to social networking sites.

Today's generation known as the 'touch generation' are being introduced to technology earlier and earlier each year, with smart phones and tablets becoming the latest 'must-haves' for many younger children. Some children take on a different persona when they get behind the screen and cyber-bullying is perhaps the most common form of bullying in this day and age. Whereas before once the school day was over the bullying stopped, at least until the next day, with social media it is impossible to escape. According to the Civil Resistance and Power Politics Sir Adam Roberts, Timothy Garton Ash, 2011-09-29 This widely praised book identified peaceful struggle as a key phenomenon in international politics a year before the revolutions in Tunisia and Egypt confirmed its central argument Civil resistance non violent action against such challenges as dictatorial rule racial discrimination and foreign military occupation is a significant but inadequately understood feature of world politics Especially through the peaceful revolutions of 1989 and the developments in the Arab world since December 2010 it has helped to shape the world we live in Civil Resistance and Power Politics covers most of the leading cases including the actions master minded by Gandhi the US civil rights struggle in the 1960s the Islamic revolution in Iran in 1979 the people power revolt in the Philippines in the 1980s the campaigns against apartheid in South Africa the various movements contributing to the collapse of the Soviet Bloc in 1989 91 and in this century the colour revolutions in Georgia and Ukraine The chapters written by leading experts are richly descriptive and analytically rigorous This book addresses the complex interrelationship between civil resistance and other dimensions of power It explores the question of whether civil resistance should be seen as potentially replacing violence completely or as a phenomenon that operates in conjunction with and modification of power politics It looks at cases where campaigns were repressed including China in 1989 and Burma in 2007 It notes that in several instances including Northern Ireland Kosovo and Georgia civil resistance movements were followed by the outbreak of armed conflict It also includes a chapter with new material from Russian archives showing how the Soviet leadership responded to civil resistance and a comprehensive bibliographical essay Illustrated throughout with a remarkable selection of photographs this uniquely wide ranging and path breaking study is written in an accessible style and is intended for the general reader as well as for students of Modern History Politics Sociology and International Relations

The Role of External Support in Nonviolent Campaigns Erica Chenoweth, Maria Stephan, 2021-02-04 Nonviolent campaigns usually take place in complex domestic and international settings where support from outside actors can be a double edged sword We argue that nonviolent campaigns tend to benefit the most from external assistance that allows them to generate high participation maintain nonviolent discipline deter crackdowns and elicit security force defections But various forms of external assistance have mixed effects on the characteristics and outcomes of nonviolent campaigns We use original qualitative and quantitative data to examine the ways that external assistance impacted the characteristics and success rates of post 2000 maximalist uprisings Among other findings we argue that long term investment in civil society and democratic institutions can strengthen the societal foundations for nonviolent movements that activists who receive training prior to peak mobilization are much more likely to mobilize campaigns with high participation low fatalities and greater likelihood of defections that donor coordination is important to be able to effectively support and leverage nonviolent campaigns and that concurrent external support to armed groups tends to undermine nonviolent movements in numerous ways Flexible donor assistance that supports safe spaces for campaign planning and relationship building and multilateral diplomatic pressure that mitigates regime repression can be particularly helpful for nonviolent campaigns
